Two Hospitals Plan Q. Center Presence

By SCOTT JACKSON

The approval process for a new medical office building in Quincy Center has yet to begin, but the developer of the property has reached an agreement with two local hospital groups who would share the new space.

Mayor Thomas Koch

on Feb. 7 announced South Shore Health System - the operator of South Shore Hospital - and Partners HealthCare's Brigham and Women's Hospital would rent the space in the 200,000 square foot building that will be constructed on the site of the city-owned Ross

Lot. Quincy-based FoxRock Properties will construct the new building, along with a 140-room hotel and a third building with 110 units of workforce housing.

Construction on site could start as soon as the spring of 2020, the mayor

NQ MBTA Station Project Starts Feb. 17

By SCOTT JACKSON

Half the parking spaces at the North Quincy MBTA station will close the week of Feb. 17 as the first phase of a mixed-use development on site begins.

Quincy residents and several elected officials raised concerns about the plan during a community meeting Feb. 6, saying the T should do more to make up for the loss of parking spaces, including a shuttle service to and from Squantum Point Park, where more than 800 parking spaces are available.

About 100 residents attended the meeting, which lasted nearly three hours, inside the North Quincy High School auditorium.

Two firms, Atlantic Development and Bozzuto Development, plan to construct

$100,000 For Boston Harbor Defenses Study

By SCOTT JACKSON

City councillors unanimously approved a $100,000 appropriation to help develop a plan to protect Quincy and other communities near Boston Harbor from rising sea levels.

The council approved Mayor Thomas Koch's request for the funding on Feb. 4. Koch had introduced a request for the approprition in September.

Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy, who represents the neighborhoods hit hardest by a powerful nor'easter last March that caused coastal flooding in low-lying areas, said the money would help the city develop a plan to protect its residents in the future.

"I think this appropriation, $100,000, for the Boston Harbor regional resiliency plan will be appropriate...so the proper plans, the proper studies, the due diligence, can be done looking at the long range down the road," McCarthy said Feb. 4.

The money would fund the first stages of developing a regional plan to address rising sea levels and

New Middle School Opening June 3

By TOM GORMAN

The new South-West Middle School will welcome students on Monday, June 3.

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro informed the school committee Feb. 6 that the new school will be ready the Monday after the Memorial Day weekend.

The school was initially scheduled to open the week after April vacation, but the recent lockout of National Grid gas workers delayed the installation of natural gas service to the building. The seven-month long lockout ended last month and the installation project is expected to get underway soon.

DeCristofaro previously explained that once the gas service is installed, there is a 16 to 18-week testing process that must be completed

"Presidents Day weekend is the start of February school vacation in our city, so the events planned for Family Winterfest are a great way to start vacation," said Mayor Thomas P. Koch.

An array of local food trucks will be on hand including Wahlburgers, Montillio's Wood Burning Pizza Oven and Pastry Truck, Hive Beer and Wine Food Truck and Sadie Maes Cupcake.

The 2019 Presidents Day Winter Festival is being produced by the City of Quincy, in conjunction with JM Productions. In the event of rain or snow, the festivities will be rescheduled for Monday, Feb. 18th from 2 to 7 p.m. Check quincyma.gov for details.

said, and would take about 18 months to complete.

Koch said the closure of the Quincy Medical Center in December 2014 left a void the new building in Quincy Center would fill.

"We saw the demise of Quincy Medical over the years, and since that time we've had a tremendous vacuum of medical services. People have to leave the city to get some very basic medical needs taken care of. That's about to change," Koch said.

"This will be a fulfillment of the transformation of the downtown and the return of some excellent, professional medical services for the residents of the city."

Rob Hale, the founder of FoxRock Properties and the President and CEO of Granite Telecommunications, said his company is proud to be part of the resurgence in Quincy.

"Quincy a couple hundred years ago was an important part of America. For a couple decades, it hasn't run as augustly as it used to be, but in the last five years it has had a resurgence," Hale said. "We want to be part of that resurgence and we're honored to be part of that resurgence."

Koch noted FoxRock is the latest example of a Quincy developer contributing to the new Quincy Center.

"It wouldn't happen otherwise," Koch responded when asked if he was heartened to see a Quincy firm develop the Ross Lot.

"When you look at the downtown, Quincy Mutual - West of Chestnut - a 150-year-old company. Peter O'Connell has been around for 50 years...he's building the 15-story building. The Galvin Company, local guys, they just built 56 condominium units. The Quincy people have stepped up.

"Rob Hale didn't grow up here, but Rob Hale chose here, runs his businesses here, loves this city, and he's in a position where he's got an ability to fund this stuff. That's huge. That makes all the difference in the world.

"Street-Works years ago, they were great planners and they helped us reach our vision, but they didn't have the deep pockets to execute. We've got someone who can execute."

Dr. Gene Green, the president and CEO of the South Shore Health System, said the mix of medical offices coming to the new building would be refined over the next year.

"Everything gets thrown on the table," he said.

Green said the medical offices would be "out-patient-oriented," and it is unlikely the facility would include an emergency department, trauma center or maternity ward.

South Shore Health System also plans to move into the second and third floors of the office building at 1495 Hancock St. in Quincy Center, which is also owned by FoxRock, this summer. A primary-care practice will operate inside that building, with offerings including internal medicine, family

Parents Can Schedule Kindergarten Registration Appointment Online

By TOM GORMAN

Parents and guardians can now schedule an online appointment to register their child for kindergarten in the city's public schools.

Assistant to the Superintendent of Schools Laura Owens informed the school committee on Feb. 6 that this year, in an attempt to streamline the registration process, parents can schedule an appointment. In previous years, parents just showed up at their neighborhood school to register their child when the registration period began.

"This year, we will roll out a pilot where families will preregister and we will generate lists for each of the school sites and for central registration where they will schedule an appointment for kindergarten registration," she said.

The scheduled appointments are expected to ease waiting times that have been a problem.

"Families would come in and, depending on the size of the school, can be quite a crowded day," she said.

DECORATIVE WOMEN'S WATCHES

When it comes to the selection of decorative women's watches that can be passed down as heirlooms, those made of intrinsically valuable metals and gemstones tend to hold their value far better than watches made from stainless steel. Watches from manufacturers with elite reputations for quality and high-end mechanisms with "complications" tend to surpass all others. In fact, over the past 15 years, there has been something of a renaissance in collectible women's watches that has included good mechanical movements, enamel detailing and gemstone settings. Bracelet watches with lavish stone settings have become particularly desirable. These intricate bracelet patterns with gemstones transform ordinary timepieces into horological masterpieces, even when coupled with quartz movements.

Our customers choose our watches and other fine jewelry because the pieces make a personal statement about them. The fashion-conscious people who come to us at Rogers Jewelry do so because they don't want to look just like their friends - they want to express their own unique, individual style. You aren't just another shopper when you visit us; you're as special as the designs we create. We hope to see you soon at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center for fine jewelry sure to suit all tastes and all budgets. PH: 617-773-3636.

Safety, Training New Fire Chief's Top Priorities

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy's new fire chief said the safety of his firefighters and the city's residents, and training for those firefighters, are his top priorities.

He is also taking steps to make the department more proactive.

Jack Cadegan, age 63, was appointed Quincy's 15th fire chief by Mayor Thomas Koch last Dec. 17, succeeding Joseph Barron, who led the department for the past decade before retiring last July. Cadegan first joined the department in 1985 and was promoted to lieutenant in 2007, captain in 2011 and deputy chief in 2014.

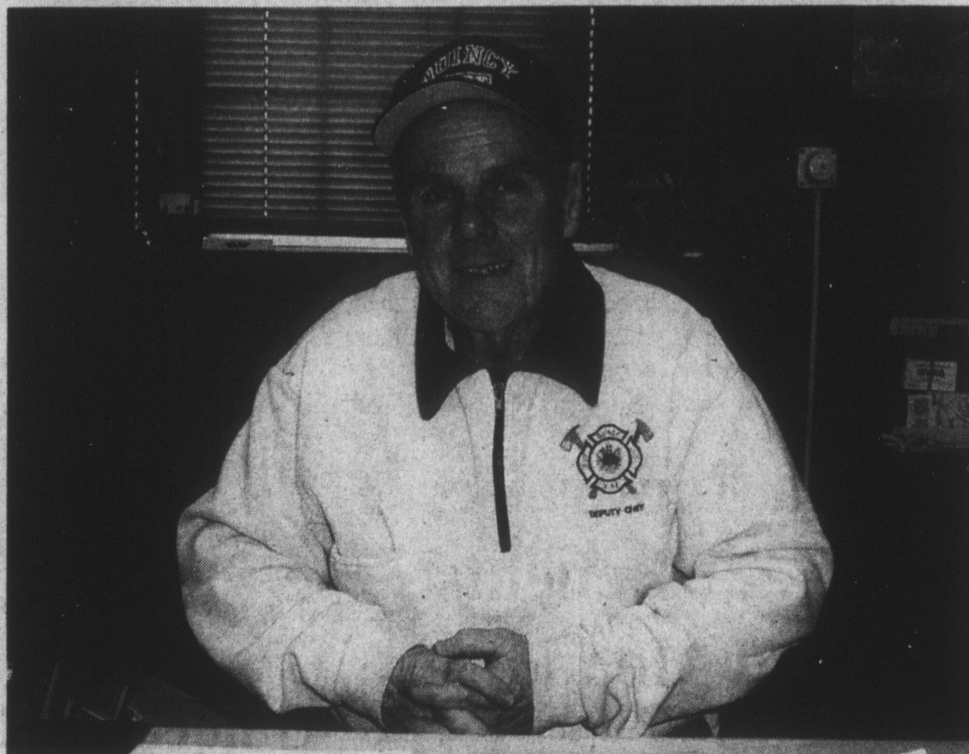

In a recent interview, Cadegan said he never envisioned becoming the fire chief when he first joined the department. Cadegan contemplated retirement before he and his wife, Karen, talked about the chief's position and he decided to apply for the job. An assessment center hired by the city to vet candidates for the job would give Cadegan the highest marks of all three applicants.

"It was never a position that was on my radar," Cadegan said of being named fire chief. "To be honest with you, I had planned on being retired by now. I had my 33 years in, and I was ready to go, but when this came up myself and my wife talked, that if I was willing to put the work in maybe I would throw my hat in the ring and see where it landed. If I didn't come in number one, I wasn't going to take it. I just got lucky and I'm kind of glad I did it today. It's been good so far."

"It's the people that you work with that either makes or breaks it, and everyone has been wonderful so far."

Cadegan spent the first 15 years of his career on an engine company, and then was assigned to Ladder 2 in Wollaston. He credited his wife for encouraging him to take a promotional exam, which led to his promotion to the rank of lieutenant.

"My first 15 years was basically on an engine company, which I enjoyed, but then a good friend of mine was retiring, and I got his spot on Ladder 2 up in Wollaston and I loved it. I very much loved working on a ladder company — the whole search and rescue thing and ventilation, being up on the roof," Cadegan said. "It was a lot different than an engine company — they're both very important for sure, but it was just a little different. I guess it was time for a change after 15 years.

JACK CADEGAN, who was sworn-in as Quincy's 15th fire chief Dec. 17, 2018, said he never envisioned becoming the city's top firefighter when he joined the department in 1985. "It's the people that you work with that either makes or breaks it, and everyone has been wonderful so far," he said of his new job in a recent interview. Cadegan identified safety and training as two of his priorities, along with making the department more proactive.

"I probably would still be there, but my wife made a good point. As I got older and guys were starting to retire, she was the one who kind of mentioned 'what about taking the promotional exam,' which I didn't want any part of. I loved working with the guys that I worked with — why would I leave? She basically said, 'you're all getting older, guys are going to be retiring and moving on.' She was absolutely right."

"When I made lieutenant, it was like a brand new job again. As much as I loved what I was doing, it was like starting over. It was so exciting so to speak. It was a little more nerve-racking because you had to worry about the guys more now. I never wanted to get anybody hurt by something stupid that I asked them to do."

Cadegan said ensuring safety of Quincy's residents and firefighters is of utmost importance to him.

"I came in with some simple ideas. If I get into gray areas, which I very much want to avoid, just put life safety first. If I have to make a hard decision, I say what's the life safety aspect," Cadegan said. "I did that when I was deputy chief and it worked well for me for four years, so I'm going to continue doing that. The life safety of the public and the life safety of our firefighters."

Cadegan is also working with Capt. Nate Egan to come up with monthly training modules that will be reviewed at each of the city's eight firehouses.

"We've always done our training, but I wanted to do a little more and get it more on a regular basis. Captain Egan and myself came up with these training-of-the-month modules," Cadegan said. "We wanted to ease our way into it, so to speak — we didn't want to bite off more than we can chew."

The first training module focused on basement fires, Cadegan said. That topic was chosen following the death of Christopher Roy, a 36-year-old Worcester firefighter who died in December after being badly injured responding to a house fire.

"A couple months ago Worcester fire lost one of their firefighters in a basement fire, so the first module that we put out was basically going over the procedures for a basement fire to hopefully honor his memory by protecting our guys," Cadegan said.

"[There is] nothing worse than losing a firefighter in the line of duty, but...if we can learn from the tragedy there and protect guys in the future — then I think we honor his memory. So, for Christopher Roy, the first one that we put out, was basement fires."

The second training module will focus on mayday operations.

"When a firefighter goes down — whether he's lost or out of air or in distress — we declare a mayday. You really need everybody on board to know what they have to do because you have such a limited window in time to get them out," Cadegan said. "It's not like in the movies where you see them grab the guy and they drag him — it takes quite a lot of manpower to get a guy out of a building."

"First of all, a lot of times there has been a collapse, so there is a lot of debris on them. They have their own weight plus the weight of all their gear, which is another 75 or 80 pounds, and then you're dragging them through an area that is either still on fire, heavy smoke, a lot of debris, and it just doesn't happen easy. If we're not all on board, it's not going to go well."

To make the department more proactive, Cadegan said he extended the office hours of the Fire Prevention Bureau, so it is now open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on weekdays. The bureau, he explained, is a resource for residents who might have questions for the department, such as how to dispose of flammable items.

"Fire prevention fields a lot of the public's questions — things that they're not sure about. They are so up on the laws and things of that nature. They're a great resource to the public for getting things done," Cadegan said.

"With a really good fire prevention bureau, we can be extremely proactive. As good as we are, we can always be better. I've been very impressed with the work so far."

The chief noted the Fire Prevention Bureau has been visiting buildings whose sprinkler systems failed during previous winters' cold snaps to outline steps the property owners can take to stop the same thing from re-occurring this winter.

"Over the years — especially this time of year — we've had large residential buildings that their sprinklers freeze, and when you take the sprinkler out of the equation for a building, it really makes it vulnerable," Cadegan said.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1934 postcard showing the old granite railroad bridge over Furnace Brook Parkway in West Quincy. Locals knew it as Echo Bridge because of its resonating qualities. The bridge was torn down to build the Southeast Expressway along the right-of-way of what was the Granite branch of the Old Colony Railroad. The branch line ran from the Atlantic Bridge on Hancock Street in North Quincy across the Montclair marshes serving stations in Montclair, East Milton and West Quincy. It rejoined the main line just south of today's Quincy Adams station. The Granite Line was built on part of America's first railroad right-of-way, which is where it got its name. It ran for almost 70 years from 1871 to 1940.

Municipal Parking Area A Downtown Welcome

Quincy's Municipal Parking area has been completed and in use for only a few short months now but its success has been so apparent that already a movement has been started to develop a somewhat similar parking lot on the east side of Hancock Street.

Former Mayor Charles A. Ross advocated such a development when he dedicated the present parking lot. Last week Councillor Amelio Della Chiesa announced he is introducing in the council a public hearing order for a parking area east of Hancock St., between Revere Rd., Cottage Ave and Cottage St.

The present parking area forms only about one-half of the goal advocated by Quincy Merchants and the Quincy Patriot Ledger.

The parking area was built in the early 1950s and became known as the Hancock Parking Area.

Woodward School Announces New Scholarship Program For Middle School Applicants

The Woodward School announces a new donor supported, merit scholarship program for applicants entering their Middle School, grades 6-8.

The Abigail Adams Scholarship Program is funding merit scholarships in the amount of $4,000 yearly for the student's middle school years, awarded on the basis of a student's academic and other achievements, good character, and an application essay.

The new scholarships are announced at an exciting time for Woodward, as it is enters its 125th year in Quincy Center, and after welcoming a new Head of School, Renee Du-Chaine-Farkes, in September.

Quincy residents may have noticed the extensive renovation, preservation and expansion project that has been underway at Woodward since last summer, the result of a significant donation for this purpose.

Woodward School Trustees have voted to fund the new scholarships to support a strategic growth of the student body, as well. Farkes said she is enthusiastic about the transformation of the school's historic facilities, the impact on the student experience at Woodward, and now, dedicated scholarship funding that will allow more girls to benefit.

"I am delighted about this new academic scholarship program for girls entering our middle school. At such an important time in a girl's development, the right environment, that both challenges and nurtures a girl to achieve academic success, confidence and voice as she grows, makes a tremendous difference in the course of her life," Farkes said.

"These scholarships are to provide this opportunity to girls who merit it. It comes at an especially exciting time for Woodward. We are entering our 125th year on Hancock Street. We are growing and expanding our facilities, and we are growing our student body, beginning at the middle school level, Grades 6, 7 and 8. We are so enthused and excited to draw engaged, positive and talented girls through this very special opportunity. I am excited to meet the applicants," Farkes added.

Woodward's scholarship programs also include scholarships dedicated to Quincy residents, municipal workers and all educators within the city, reflecting the importance the school places on its historic legacy in Quincy, as well as its founding principle of access and affordability to the benefits of a Woodward education for young women.

Interested applicants may inquire to admissions@thewoodardschool.

'Bearnard's Book' By Deborah Underwood, Illustrated By Misa Saburi

'The Fine Print' Book Review

By LAURIE HIGGINS
'Bearnard's Book' written by Deborah Underwood and illustrated by Misa Saburi

I always read the dedications in books. Authors and illustrators pour their heart and soul into their books, and I know they have helped along the way. It is always enced the stories we are reading.

Deborah Underwood has dedicated this book to the readers, "just the way you are," and Misa Saburi has dedicated this book to the students at the Lincoln School Extended Day Program in Brookline. I was drawn to these dedications because of the connections, to me as the reader and to a local school. The dedications also made me want to bring this book into my classroom, but once I read the story of Bearnard and his good friend Gertie, I knew I had to bring this story to my students!

Just like with authors and illustrators, the main character, Bearnard has the support of a friend. Gertie will help him navigate a new experience and learn a little bit about himself along the way. Bearnard has received a letter telling him he will be in a book. This has been a dream of his forever, and he immediately starts imagining all the ways children will be reading about him in his book.

Bearnard happily shares this news with Gertie and then sets off to prepare for this important event; he is a conscientious bear. He begins to study other books about bears. As he reads, he becomes concerned about what his story might be. Will he need to float in an umbrella, make messes, or share his porridge like the bears in the books he is reading? These are all things that make Bearnard very nervous. Gertie, however, helps her friend "try" these things. Even though he is still nervous, it is with his friend by his side that Bearnard is able to realize his dream and learn who he is inside.

Many children will relate to the feelings of insecurity Bearnard is having. How can someone be brave when they aren't sure they will be accepted for who they are?

Underwood and Saburi have crafted this engaging story about self discovery and the power of friendship with heartfelt words and beautiful illustrations! I know this book will be an important mentor for all readers. Bearnard's Book was released Feb. 5 from Macmillan Publishing.

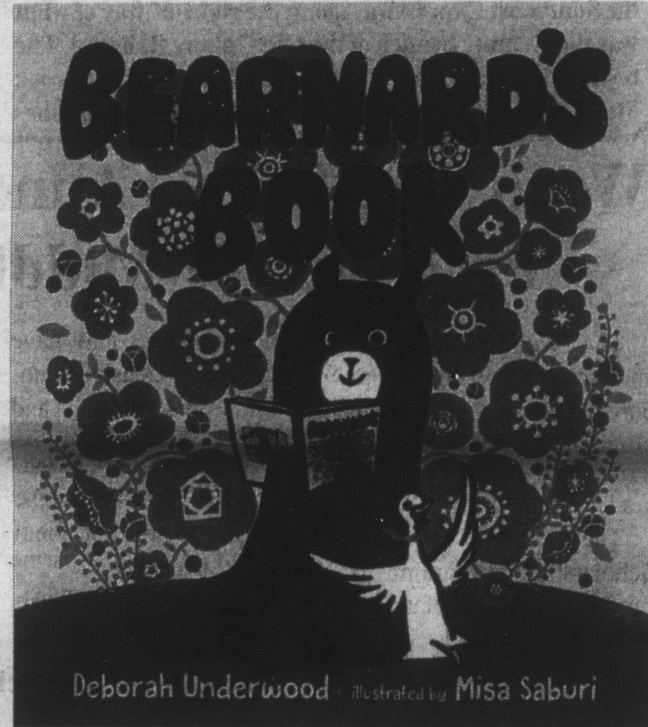

And don't forget to read... The Fine Print.

Applications Available For Evan Dwyer Scholarship

The Montclair School PTO announces applications are available for a $300 book scholarship named in memory of former student Evan Dwyer.

Evan attended Montclair in kindergarten and first grade then lost his battle with leukemia on Feb. 13, 2004.

He adored butterflies and was able to catch them in his hands. He enjoyed spending time at Ellis Haven Campground in Plymouth. His favorite adventure story was "Peter Pan."

He was born in Quincy, where he lived all his life. He is survived by his parents, Michael J. Dwyer of the Quincy Fire Department and Gina (Zero) Dwyer; a brother, Joseph and a sister, Kelsie.

The Montclair School PTO provides one (1) $300 scholarship to help defray the high cost of books for Montclair School graduates as they continue their education after high school. As a community, the PTO values the importance of the high quality education Quincy children receive throughout their years in the Quincy Public School system and hope to encourage them to continue their education.

To qualify for the $300 Book Scholarship, the student must have attended a minimum of 3rd through 5th grade at Montclair School and be attending an accredited post-secondary university, college, or trade school.

Applicants must fill out the form (available at the school office) and submit it to the office staff at Montclair School no later than March 1 (or mail it to Montclair School PTO, Attn: Evan Dwyer Book Scholarship, 8 Belmont St., Quincy MA 02171.)

The recipient will be selected at random from a drawing of all applicants at the March PTO meeting. Once selected the recipient can submit up to $300 in book receipts for reimbursement.

WHAT'S COOKING

with
Marie & Susie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUSIE FALCO

Penne Rustica

By MARIE

There are so many ways to cook pasta, and although my favorite pastas are usually served with tomato sauce, this recipe from my niece Anita is a delicious alternative to the norm and was enjoyed by all.

PENNE RUSTICA

Serves 6 to 8

Recipe:

16 oz. whole wheat penne rigate
1/4 cup olive oil
1-1/2 tbsp. Garlic, diced
1/2 cup onion, diced
3 cups broccoli florets

1 cup chicken broth
1/3 cup parmesan cheese, grated
Salt and pepper, to taste

Cook pasta according to package directions.

Meanwhile, heat olive oil in large skillet and sauté garlic, onion and broccoli for 7 minutes. Add chicken broth and simmer two minutes.

Then add hot "al dente" pasta to large mixing bowl.

Pour broccoli mixture and parmesan cheese over hot pasta.

Mix well and serve immediately.

Turkey Meatloaf

By SUSIE

Here is a different kind of meatloaf recipe. Full of surprising veggies and simple to put together. The coconut flour adds fiber and nutrition minus the breadcrumbs.

This recipe is a grain free recipe for those seeking to limit their grains. Serve with a salad and a sweet potato and you have a delicious and nutritious meal that won't weigh you down.

TURKEY MEATLOAF

1 lb organic ground turkey
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium onion, chopped fine
1 medium red pepper, chopped fine
2 garlic cloves, minced
4 small mushrooms, chopped fine
1/2 cup shredded zucchini
2 eggs
1/4 cup tomato paste
1/2 cup coconut flour (takes place of the breadcrumbs)
1/4 cup fresh chopped parsley

1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 teaspoon cumin
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
Sea salt and pepper

Saute' onion, pepper, and mushrooms for about five minutes until slightly browned in a bit of olive oil. Let cool.

Mix everything together and knead all ingredients well and place in a nice even mound on parchment paper lined cookie sheet.

Bake for about 45 minutes until cooked through.

ENC Theatre For Social Justice 'The Laramie Project' Feb. 21-23

Eastern Nazarene College's Theatre for Social Justice program is set to produce The Laramie Project, Feb. 21-23 as part of the college's Social Justice Week.

This year marks the first year of the Theatre for Social Justice program at ENC which has 12 majors and minors. As part of this program, the students produce a published play based on a social justice theme each February. The theme is determined by conversations the college community has deemed important for them and the larger community.

For over a year, ENC has had many conversations -- through chapel services, panel discussions, and workshops -- about its position as a representative of the Nazarene denomination and the needs of its LGBTQ students.

"It made sense that we should do a play that addresses this topic since we were talking about it all over the campus," said Tara Brooke Watkins, head of the TFSJ program and director of the play.

The Laramie Project is a documentary theatre piece about the murder of Matthew Shepherd, a gay college student in Laramie, Wyoming. The play is a collection of interviews of Laramie residents conducted by the Tectonic Theatre Company.

"This is one of the reasons I thought the play would be a good choice," said Watkins. "There's no playwright's message. It is just verbatim interviews. It invites us into a community and the audience gets to listen to how the community responded to this murder and the topic of homosexuality." The play features 13 students playing over fifty Laramie residents who were interviewed shortly after Shepherd's murder in 1998. "Since this theatre season also marks the twentieth anniversary of the murder, it felt important that a new theatre for social justice program engage with this national moment."

The TFSJ students are also working on a similar project to what Tectonic did in Wyoming. All semester, they are working at Father Bill's Place running story circles, conducting interviews, and using theatre techniques to hear guests' stories about homelessness.

"We've been at Father Bill's for about a month now and already we are blown away by how open and admirable these guests are and how great the staff is," Watkins explained that next fall, these students will take all the stories they've heard and interviews they've conducted and will create an original play based on them. It will premiere next February during Social Justice Week as a fundraiser for Father Bill's Place.

"The rehearsal process has been an emotional one," said cast member Marci Zaccardi. "I have to play the preacher, Fred Phelps who went to Laramie and spewed hate speech at the funeral. It's a hard monologue to get through."

Cast member Polly Gomes said, "I just hope that people will come to this and look hard at their own lives and ask how they use religion to contribute to hate crimes. Like when people make homophobic comments in church or say that gay people are going to hell."

Jake Ploof, who plays Father Roger Schmitt said, "My character says, 'Do you realize that when you call someone names, you are doing violence?' and I think that's what I hope people realize. Just because you're not using the gun, does not mean you are not doing violence."

The Laramie Project runs Feb. 21-23, all performances at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday performances will be preceded by panels of individuals who identify as members of the LGBTQ and Christian community. Panel discussions are open to anyone, not only those who have a ticket to the performances.

Panels will begin at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $10 for adults, $8 for students and seniors. Tickets may be purchased by calling 617-745-3715. There is a limited number of seats, so reservations are recommended.

The production is not recommended for children under 12 as it features strong language and adult themes. ENC will produce Romeo and Juliet, April 11-13 and will announce its fall musical in February.

Vitamin B12 Deficiency: Symptoms, Prevention

A Message From Ruth Jones, Director Of Nursing, Quincy Health Dept.

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Vitamin B12, also known as cobalamin, is an important water-soluble vitamin. It plays a crucial role in the production of your red blood cells and DNA, as well as the correct functioning of your nervous system.

Since your body doesn't make vitamin B12, you have to obtain it from animal-based foods or from supplements. This is something you should try to do on a regular basis, because your body doesn't store vitamin B12 for a long period of time.

Vitamin B12 is naturally found in animal foods, including meats, fish, poultry, eggs and dairy. However, it can also be acquired in products fortified with B12, such as some varieties of bread, cereals and plant-based milk. Regrettably, B12 deficiency is common, especially as you age. You're at risk of deficiency if you don't get a sufficient amount from your diet or aren't able to absorb enough from the food you eat.

People at Risk of a B12 Deficiency include:

- The elderly
- Those who've had surgery that removes the part of the bowel that absorbs B12
- People on the drug metformin for diabetes
- People following a strict vegan diet
- Those taking long-term antacid drugs for heartburn
- Atrophic gastritis, in which your stomach lining has thinned
- Pernicious anemia,

which makes it hard for your body to absorb vitamin B12

• Conditions that affect your small intestine, such as Crohn's disease, celiac disease, bacterial growth, or a parasite

• Immune system disorders, such as Graves' disease or lupus

Symptoms

Unfortunately, symptoms of a vitamin B12 deficiency can take years to be recognized, and diagnosing it can be complicated. A B12 deficiency can sometimes be confused with a folate deficiency. Low levels of B12 can cause your folate levels to decline. However, if you have a B12 deficiency, correcting low folate levels may mask the deficiency and fail to remedy the underlying health issue.

If you have vitamin B12 deficiency, there is a possibility that you could become anemic. A mild deficiency may cause no symptoms. But if untreated, it may lead to symptoms such as:

- Weakness, tiredness, or lightheadedness
- Heart palpitations and shortness of breath
- Pale skin
- Jaundice
- A smooth tongue
- Constipation, diarrhea, loss of appetite, or gas
- Nerve problems like numbness or tingling, muscle weakness, and problems walking
- Vision loss
- Mental problems like depression, memory loss, or behavioral changes

Treatment

If you have pernicious anemia or have trouble absorbing vitamin B12, you will most likely need shots of this vitamin initially. You may need to continue to receive these injections on a regular basis or take a supplement. If you don't consume animal products, you have options.

You can change your diet to include vitamin B12-fortified grains, a supplement or B12 injections, or a high-dose oral vitamin B12 if you are deficient. Older adults who have a vitamin B12 deficiency may need to take a daily B12 supplement or a multivitamin that contains B12.

For most people, treatment resolves the problem. But, any nerve damage that happened due to the deficiency could be permanent.

Prevention

Most people can prevent vitamin B12 deficiency by eating enough meat, poultry, seafood, dairy products, and eggs. If you don't eat animal products, or you have a medical condition that limits how well your body absorbs nutrients, you can take vitamin B12 in a multivitamin or other supplement and consume foods fortified with vitamin B12. If you are a strict vegetarian or vegan, it's important to eat breads, cereals, or other grains that have been fortified with vitamin B12, or take a daily supplement. A standard multivitamin delivers 6 micrograms, more than enough to cover the average body's daily need. If you are over age 50, the Institute of Medicine recommends that you get extra B12 from a supplement, since you may not be able to absorb enough of the vitamin through foods. A standard multivitamin should be sufficient.

Bottom line is that a Vitamin B12 deficiency is common and can present itself in various ways, making it difficult to identify. If you're at risk and have any of the symptoms above, speak to your doctor.

For most people, a B12 deficiency should be easy to prevent simply by ensuring you are getting enough B12 in your diet.

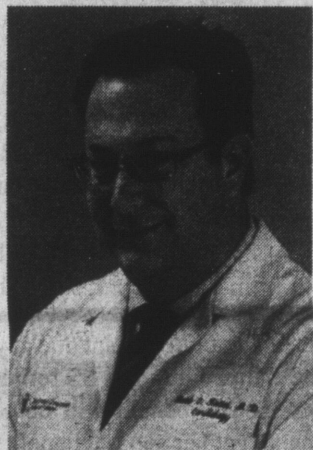

Ruth Jones is the director of Nursing for the City of Quincy Health Department.

Social Security Matters

Social Security For Couple With Large Age Difference

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: My wife is 63 and I'm 55. I've been the breadwinner for 37 years and draw almost $2,000 per month tax free from VA disability for life. I'm also still working until I'm 60 or 62, not sure yet, and will have a pension of about $1,900 per month. We have about $300k put away in retirement accounts. Since I still have a few years I haven't really looked much into retirement. Is there anything you can recommend on how to go about Social Security with the age difference? Signed: Younger Husband

Dear Younger: With your VA disability benefit, your expected pension from work, your savings and your eventual Social Security benefit you are positioned better than many for your later retirement. You didn't say whether your wife is already collecting Social Security benefits on her own work record, and that can be a factor in deciding when you should apply. This is because (from what you've told me) your wife will eventually be entitled to spousal benefits from your record. To start, please note that your wife's full retirement age (FRA) for Social Security purposes is 66 years and 2 months, while your full retirement age is 67. Your full retirement age is when you get 100% of what you have earned from a lifetime of working, but if you claim benefits earlier than your FRA, they will be reduced and if you wait beyond your FRA you can earn more. When to claim your Social Security should always take several things into account — your health, your current (and future) financial needs and your expected longevity. You cannot claim your Social Security until you are at least 62 years of age, but if you claim at 62 you will incur a 30% cut in the benefit you would be entitled to at age 67, and that is a permanent reduction.

Assuming your wife will be eligible for a spousal benefit from your record, since she will have reached her FRA whenever you claim benefits she can get up to 50% of the benefit amount you are due at your full retirement age. But if she claimed her own SS retirement benefit before her FRA, her spousal benefit will be somewhat reduced. Your wife cannot get her spousal benefit until you start collecting your Social Security so that may be a factor influencing the decision of when you should apply. While that might suggest you should apply as soon as you're eligible, you should also remember you will take a cut in benefits by claiming earlier than your FRA. You can maximize your benefit by waiting beyond your FRA to apply and earning delayed retirement credits which would yield a benefit 8% higher for each year you delay, up to age 70 when you could get 24% more than you'll get at age 67. However, delaying would mean your wife can't collect her spousal benefit until you start your benefits, so you should weigh the loss of her spousal benefit against the increase you get by delaying (remembering that you would get the higher benefit for the rest of your life, which is where expected longevity comes into play). And one other point: if you claim before your FRA and continue to work, you will be subject to Social Security's annual earnings limit until you reach your FRA (exceeding the annual limit will cause Social Security to withhold some of your benefits).

So, as you can see, there are numerous considerations when it comes to deciding when you should claim your Social Security. I suggest you get a Statement of Estimated Benefits from Social Security. You can do that by contacting your local office (find it at www.ssa.gov/locator) or by creating your personal "My Social Security" online account at www.ssa.gov. Your Statement of Estimated Benefits will show your estimated benefit at ages 62, 67 and 70, and you can evaluate which of those amounts is most beneficial, considering your financial needs, your wife's potential spousal benefit, and your anticipated longevity.

Vibrating Steering Wheel, Gas In Oil, Rattling Noises

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

In July I bought a low mileage 2015 Nissan Rogue SV. After a month or so, I started to notice a vibration in the steering wheel primarily when driving between 20-45 mph at a constant 1,250 RPMs. I took the vehicle back to the dealer and they looked at it for a few days. They told me they found and replaced a bad exhaust mount and that the vibration was virtually gone. Unfortunately, that didn't take care of the vibration. I took the Rogue to a second dealer and was told that transmission is designed to cause the vibration. I asked them why I didn't feel the vibration in any of the other new or used Rogues I test drove. They just answered that the car is supposed to have a vibration and suggested that I call Nissan if I wasn't happy. I can't believe that Nissan has sold over 1 million Rogues, and all have a built-in vibration in the steering wheel. I really like the vehicle, but the vibration is annoying when driving on local roads. Do you have any suggestions?

Some continually variable transmissions (CVT), like the one used in your Rogue, have a somewhat undesirable vibration, but it is a characteristic of the design. Before I wrote this off as normal, I would want the dealer to check for any technical service bulletins that address vibration. Using AllData, the technical database that I use found one that describes a low speed vibration caused by the electric controlled coupling for the rear drive unit. In addition, I would want the dealer to perform a vibration analysis to determine the source of the vibration to determine if it is in fact a normal characteristic or if something wrong.

I have a 2006 Toyota Solara and it's time for a new car. I'm in my 80s and I'm looking for a car with some of the newest safety features that my current car doesn't have. I'm specifically interested in the back-up camera, automatic emergency braking and cross traffic sensors. So far, the only car that has everything I want is the Hyundai Sonata. What do you think of the Sonata and is there other cars I should look at?

The Hyundai Sonata is a fine vehicle and is available with all the latest safety features that you are looking for. The Honda Accord has the back-up camera and emergency braking standard with cross-traffic alert as an option. For something a little different the Subaru can be equipped with all the features you want plus it has standard all-wheel-drive, which adds to winter safety. The conventional wisdom is, if you are shopping for a new car, you should consider one with the latest safety features.

I purchased a used Mitsubishi, which is still under the warranty. The dealer said that since this is a Certified-Pre-Owned vehicle I need to come back to the dealer for service to maintain the warranty. I have built up a great relationship over the years with my own mechanic, but don't want to void the 100,000-mile 10-year warranty. If my mechanic uses Mitsubishi parts will that maintain the warranty?

Perhaps you misunderstood the dealer; you only need to maintain the car in accordance to the owner's manual to maintain the warranty. As long as you keep records and use quality parts your car will be covered under the warranty.

I have an old Mustang that I'm working on and have a problem. The car runs okay but I'm getting gas in the oil. I checked everything out and it looked like the carburetor was dripping so I replaced it and changed the oil again. Now about a month later, I'm getting gas in the oil again. There is only one vent hose and I disconnected and checked that. Any ideas?

The next thing I would do is replace the fuel pump. It is possible the diaphragm in the fuel pump is leaking at allowing gasoline to go into the crankcase.

I have been experiencing a vibration on my 2012 Toyota Highlander since I purchased it used about two years ago. The vibration has started to get just a bit worse and now there is a slight vibration that changes when I take a turn. About a year ago the car was in for service and the tires were rotated and the vibration felt better. Now I just had the oil changed and the tires rotated again the vibration and noise are terrible. Do you know of any problems with the 2012 model that I can address with my dealer?

I checked AllData, the technical database that I use and didn't find any bulletins that would address a vibration. Since the vibration changed when the tires were rotated, I would suspect the problem is still related to the tires/wheels. The simplest solution is to see if the dealer - as a test - can swap a set of wheels and tires from another vehicle. If the vibration and noise improve, the issue is related to the tires. Then at that point a technician will need to carefully inspect each tire and wheel for a problem.

I have a Ford Explorer that is making a rattling sound that seems to be coming from under the car of the driver's side. It has been in service two times in the past month and both times the shop jacked up the car and looked around but didn't see anything. It is just a noise not a vibration, but it does seem to be getting worse. Any idea what I should do?

JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

There are plenty of parts that can wear on your vehicle and make noise. Some of them are: coil spring insulators, sway-bar links, exhaust system, steering gear intermediate shaft and the lower ball-joints. Some of these parts are easy to check, others require a trained eye to spot a problem. The best method to check for a problem after a road test is to put the vehicle on a drive on style lift. This way all of the pressure and weight stay on the tires and suspension. On a frame contact lift, the suspension hangs and can mask worn parts.

I consider myself a pretty competent backyard mechanic, but I have a problem that I can't seem to find. I have a Chevy truck and there is an oil leak and I have washed down the engine to look for the leak but can't seem to pinpoint it. I have checked the oil sender, valve covers and intake manifold and can't seem to find the source of the leak. It is most certainly engine oil and not power steering or transmission fluid. Do you have any suggestions?

The contest is open to all K-12 students from Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, and Rhode Island living or attending school within AAA Northeast territory.

Poster entries must be postmarked by April 5, 2019 and mailed to:

AAA Northeast, 1415 Kellum Place, Garden City, NY 11530 Attention: Public

Affairs.

Video entries from 9-12th grade students can be submitted on a flash drive or disk and mailed or e-mailed to postercontest@aanortheast.com.

Poster entries will be judged on a state-by-state basis and from each of the three grade levels (elementary, middle and high school). First, second and third place winners will be chosen and awarded $300, $200, and $100 respectively. All first-place entries will be eligible for an additional $1,000 grand prize. Video winners will also be chosen from throughout the five states. These winners will be announced on April 22nd.

AAA members and website visitors will have the opportunity to vote for the grand prize from April 22 - 30. The winner will be announced on May 10th.

The goal of AAA's Traffic Safety Poster & Video Contest is peer to peer education, hoping young people will learn and consider safe behaviors in traffic through a poster with a creative slogan or a powerful video the public can easily recall. "Young people are visual; educating through art and media is an ideal method to impact today's student. Some are gifted artists, others use their technology skills as a powerful education tool," said Diana Imondi, AAA Northeast's Traffic Safety Programs Manager. "Traffic and automobile crashes are the leading cause of death for children ages two to eighteen years. One student's message could save a life!"

Throughout the year, AAA offers free traffic safety outreach programs, often coordinated in partnership with local police departments, schools and community centers; to help spread the word to young people about safe and unsafe practices both on the road and behind the wheel. To learn more about scheduling a AAA Northeast traffic safety program for your organization, visit AAA.com/Safety.

Social Security Matters

Social Security For Couple With Large Age Difference

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor

Dear Rusty: My wife is 63 and I'm 55. I've been the breadwinner for 37 years and draw almost $2,000 per month tax free from VA disability for life. Since I still have a few years I haven't really looked much into retirement. Is there anything you can recommend on how to go about Social Security with the age difference? Signed: Younger Husband

Dear Younger: With your VA disability benefit, your expected pension from work, your savings and your eventual Social Security benefit you are positioned better than many for your later retirement. You didn't say whether your wife is already collecting Social Security benefits on her own work record, and that can be a factor in deciding when you should apply. This is because (from what you've told me) your wife will eventually be entitled to spousal benefits from your record. To start, please note that your wife's full retirement age (FRA) for Social Security purposes is 66 years and 2 months, while your full retirement age is 67. Your full retirement age is when you get 100% of what you have earned from a lifetime of working, but if you claim benefits earlier than your FRA, they will be reduced and if you wait beyond your FRA you can earn more. When to claim your Social Security should always take several things into account - your health, your current (and future) financial needs and your expected longevity. You cannot claim your Social Security until you are at least 62 years of age, but if you claim at 62 you will incur a 30% cut in the benefit you would be entitled to at age 67, and that is a permanent reduction.

Assuming your wife will be eligible for a spousal benefit from your record, since she will have reached her FRA whenever you claim benefits she can get up to 50% of the benefit amount you are due at your full retirement age. But if she claimed her own SS retirement benefit before her FRA, her spousal benefit will be somewhat reduced. Your wife cannot get her spousal benefit until you start collecting your Social Security so that may be a factor influencing the decision of when you should apply. While that might suggest you should apply as soon as you're eligible, you should also remember you will take a cut in benefits by claiming earlier than your FRA. You can maximize your benefit by waiting beyond your FRA to apply and earning delayed retirement credits which would yield a benefit 8% higher for each year you delay, up to age 70 when you could get 24% more than you'll get at age 67. However, delaying would mean your wife can't collect her spousal benefit until you start your benefits, so you should weigh the loss of her spousal benefit against the increase you get by delaying (remembering that you would get the higher benefit for the rest of your life, which is where expected longevity comes into play). And one other point: if you claim before your FRA and continue to work, you will be subject to Social Security's annual earnings limit until you reach your FRA (exceeding the annual limit will cause Social Security to withhold some of your benefits).

So, as you can see, there are numerous considerations when it comes to deciding when you should claim your Social Security. I suggest you get a Statement of Estimated Benefits from Social Security. You can do that by contacting your local office (find it at www.ssa.gov/locator) or by creating your personal "My Social Security" online account at www.ssa.gov. Your Statement of Estimated Benefits will show your estimated benefit at ages 62, 67 and 70, and you can evaluate which of those amounts is most beneficial, considering your financial needs, your wife's potential spousal benefit, and your anticipated longevity.

Vibrating Steering Wheel, Gas In Oil, Rattling Noises

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

In July I bought a low mileage 2015 Nissan Rogue SV. After a month or so, I started to notice a vibration in the steering wheel primarily when driving between 20-45 mph at a constant 1,250 RPMs. I took the vehicle back to the dealer and they looked at it for a few days. They told me they found and replaced a bad exhaust mount and that the vibration was virtually gone. Unfortunately, that didn't take care of the vibration. I took the Rogue to a second dealer and was told that transmission is designed to cause the vibration. I asked them why I didn't feel the vibration in any of the other new or used Rogues I test drove. They just answered that the car is supposed to have a vibration and suggested that I call Nissan if I wasn't happy. I can't believe that Nissan has sold over 1 million Rogues, and all have a built-in vibration in the steering wheel. I really like the vehicle, but the vibration is annoying when driving on local roads. Do you have any suggestions?

Some continually variable transmissions (CVT), like the one used in your Rogue, have a somewhat undesirable vibration, but it is a characteristic of the design. Before I wrote this off as normal, I would want the dealer to check for any technical service bulletins that address vibration. Using AllData, the technical database that I use found one that describes a low speed vibration caused by the electric controlled coupling for the rear drive unit. In addition, I would want the dealer to perform a vibration analysis to determine the source of the vibration to determine if it is in fact a normal characteristic or if something wrong.

I have a 2006 Toyota Solara and it's time for a new car. I'm in my 80s and I'm looking for a car with some of the newest safety features that my current car doesn't have. I'm specifically interested in the back-up camera, automatic emergency braking and cross traffic sensors. So far, the only car that has everything I want is the Hyundai Sonata. What do you think of the Sonata and is there other cars I should look at?

The Hyundai Sonata is a fine vehicle and is available with all the latest safety features that you are looking for. The Honda Accord has the back-up camera and emergency braking standard with cross-traffic alert as an option. For something a little different the Subaru can be equipped with all the features you want plus it has standard all-wheel-drive, which adds to winter safety. The conventional wisdom is, if you are shopping for a new car, you should consider one with the latest safety features.

I purchased a used Mitsubishi, which is still under the warranty. The dealer said that since this is a Certified-Pre-Owned vehicle I need to come back to the dealer for service to maintain the warranty. I have built up a great relationship over the years with my own mechanic, but don't want to void the 100,000-mile 10-year warranty. If my mechanic uses Mitsubishi parts will that maintain the warranty?

Perhaps you misunderstood the dealer; you only need to maintain the car in accordance to the owner's manual to maintain the warranty. As long as you keep records and use quality parts your car will be covered under the warranty.

I have an old Mustang that I'm working on and have a problem. The car runs okay but I'm getting gas in the oil. I checked everything out and it looked like the carburetor was dripping so I replaced it and changed the oil again. Now about a month later, I'm getting gas in the oil again. There is only one vent hose and I disconnected and checked that. Any ideas?

The next thing I would do is replace the fuel pump. It is possible the diaphragm in the fuel pump is leaking at allowing gasoline to go into the crankcase.

I have been experiencing a vibration on my 2012 Toyota Highlander since I purchased it used about two years ago. The vibration has started to get just a bit worse and now there is a slight vibration that changes when I take a turn. About a year ago the car was in for service and the tires were rotated and the vibration felt better. Now I just had the oil changed and the tires rotated again the vibration and noise are terrible. Do you know of any problems with the 2012 model that I can address with my dealer?

I checked AllData, the technical database that I use and didn't find any bulletins that would address a vibration. Since the vibration changed when the tires were rotated, I would suspect the problem is still related to the tires/wheels. The simplest solution is to see if the dealer - as a test - can swap a set of wheels and tires from another vehicle. If the vibration and noise improve, the issue is related to the tires. Then at that point a technician will need to carefully inspect each tire and wheel for a problem.

I have a Ford Explorer that is making a rattling sound that seems to be coming from under the car of the driver's side. It has been in service two times in the past month and both times the shop jacked up the car and looked around but didn't see anything. It is just a noise not a vibration, but it does seem to be getting worse. Any idea what I should do?

JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

There are plenty of parts that can wear on your vehicle and make noise. Some of them are: coil spring insulators, sway-bar links, exhaust system, steering gear intermediate shaft and the lower ball-joints. Some of these parts are easy to check, others require a trained eye to spot a problem. The best method to check for a problem after a road test is to put the vehicle on a drive on style lift. This way all of the pressure and weight stay on the tires and suspension. On a frame contact lift, the suspension hangs and can mask worn parts.

I consider myself a pretty competent backyard mechanic, but I have a problem that I can't seem to find. I have a Chevy truck and there is an oil leak and I have washed down the engine to look for the leak but can't seem to pinpoint it. I have checked the oil sender, valve covers and intake manifold and can't seem to find the source of the leak. It is most certainly engine oil and not power steering or transmission fluid. Do you have any suggestions?

AAA Northeast Calls Students To Enter Annual Traffic Safety Poster & Video Contest

AAA Northeast's annual Traffic Safety Poster & Video Contest is now underway and open to students.

To enter, visit www.aaa.com/postercontest to view the rules and grade-level themes for this year's contest including pedestrian, bike, child passenger safety, and safe driving practices. The contest is open to all K-12 students from Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, and Rhode Island living or attending school within AAA Northeast territory.

Poster entries must be postmarked by April 5, 2019 and mailed to:

AAA Northeast, 1415 Kellum Place, Garden City, NY 11530 Attention: Public

Affairs.

Video entries from 9-12th grade students can be submitted on a flash drive or disk and mailed or e-mailed to postercontest@aanortheast.com.

Poster entries will be judged on a state-by-state basis and from each of the three grade levels (elementary, middle and high school). First, second and third place winners will be chosen and awarded $300, $200, and $100 respectively. All first-place entries will be eligible for an additional $1,000 grand prize. Video winners will also be chosen from throughout the five states. These winners will be announced on April 22nd.

AAA members and website visitors will have the opportunity to vote for the grand prize from April 22 - 30. The winner will be announced on May 10th.

The goal of AAA's Traffic Safety Poster & Video Contest is peer to peer education, hoping young people will learn and consider safe behaviors in traffic through a poster with a creative slogan or a powerful video the public can easily recall. "Young people are visual; educating through art and media is an ideal method to impact today's student. Some are gifted artists, others use their technology skills as a powerful education tool," said Diana Imondi, AAA Northeast's Traffic Safety Programs Manager. "Traffic and automobile crashes are the leading cause of death for children ages two to eighteen years. One student's message could save a life!"

Throughout the year, AAA offers free traffic safety outreach programs, often coordinated in partnership with local police departments, schools and community centers; to help spread the word to young people about safe and unsafe practices both on the road and behind the wheel. To learn more about scheduling a AAA Northeast traffic safety program for your organization, visit AAA.com/Safety.

NQ MBTA Station Project Starts Feb. 17

a mixed-use development with 610 apartments and 45,000 square feet of retail space on site. Their plan also includes a parking garage, which will include 852 spaces dedicated for MBTA commuters — equal to the surface spaces that will be removed during the project. Seven hundred other parking spaces are included in the plan for residential and retail use.

The garage and one of the mixed-use buildings would be built during the first phase of construction, which is expected to take 18 months. The second phase, with the remaining portions of the development, will take another 18 months.

The North Quincy station will remain open throughout the project.

Starting the week of Feb. 17, access to 600 parking spaces on the Hancock Street side of the lot will close as construction begins. T officials said more than 600 other spaces would remain open between the Hancock Street side of the station and the lot on Newport Avenue. Additionally, those officials said more than 400 spaces go unused on a regular basis at Wollaston station, which is currently closed and scheduled to re-open in August. The shuttle service between Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy will continue to run until Wollaston re-opens.

T officials also said the agency would continue to offer discounted Commuter Rail rates at Quincy Center station until the garage at North Quincy opens. The discount started when Wollaston closed and was set to end when that station re-opens this summer, but has been extended.

Evan Rowe, the MBTA's director of revenue, said more than half of the commuters who use the North Quincy lot are from Milton and communities south of Quincy. He suggested those commuters could divert themselves to other Red Line or Commuter Rail stations once the North Quincy project begins.

"Less than 50 percent of the folks who park at North Quincy are actually from Quincy," Rowe said. "What that means is there are other options that we can publicize to the folks who are coming in from Milton, who are coming in from Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham and the other South Shore communities that make up a substantial percentage of the parkers in the North Quincy facility."

Several residents asked the T officials if they had looked into using other parking lots near the North

CONSTRUCTION of mixed-use development with 610 apartments and 45,000 square feet of retail space at the North Quincy train station will start next week and continue over the next 36 months. The first phase of the project will include construction of a new garage with 852 spaces for MBTA commuters. Some 600 parking spaces on the Hancock Street side of the lot will close as construction begins. Quincy station to accommodate commuters once the construction project begins. Rowe said alternatives were looked at but no additional lots were available.

Linda Lund, a North Quincy resident, was concerned about MBTA riders parking on neighborhood streets if they no spaces were available at the station.

"The parking in North Quincy, all the side streets in North Quincy...are getting a lot of T parkers," she said.

Christopher Cassani, the head of Quincy's traffic and parking department, said his staff was working to address the issue before the station project begins.

"What we're trying to do is round out our regulations throughout the area... so that we basically have a protected area give or take a 10-minute walking radius from the station," Cassani said. "We are in the process of getting the signs installed, getting people signed up in the permit system, so by the time the parking is offline we'll have a much better system in place over there to prevent MBTA parking on side streets."

"I think we'll be in a much better position within a few short days on that front."

Lund was also the first resident to ask about the shuttle service between the North Quincy station and Squantum Point Park. T officials told the City Council in April 2017 that would be a fallback option if no other parking lots were available.

Rowe on Feb. 6 said that option had not been explored because it would be difficult to implement.

"That's not really an option that's been explored," he said. "The frequency of buses we'd have to run to make a shuttle functional would be challenging to implement."

Kevin Coughlin, a former Ward 3 councillor, said he been given assurances the shuttle service would be in place to mitigate the project's impact on neighborhoods near the station.

"When I was on the council my last term, the proposal before us tonight was in its infancy and I was given assurances at that point that there would be a shuttle bus running from Squantum Point Park because of the concerns that have been raised with neighborhoods both on the North Quincy High side of West Squantum Street as well as the Montclair area," Coughlin said.

"I'm a little disappointed to hear that has not been further pursued."

Councillor Anne Mahoney said asking commuters to divert to other parking areas was not a good plan.

"Alternative parking was promised a year ago," she said. "We're going to close North Quincy station and take off 600 spaces and you're hoping that people will divert somewhere else, because they did that at Wollaston...you don't have a good plan because you hope a diversion will happen."

Councillor Nina Liang said the project should be delayed so T officials could further consider using Squantum Point Park for shuttle service or other alternatives.

"Hold off construction until you can come back to us with real answers," she said. "If you're saying to me right now, 'I can't do anything — construction is going to start,' then I don't know why I wasted my time coming here."

Jeff Cook, the T's chief real estate officer, said he could not delay the project. He said it would take about two weeks to study the shuttle service to and from Squantum Point Park.

Rick Colon, a MassDOT official, noted the extension of Commander Shea Boulevard to Squantum Point Park would be constructed this spring; the shuttle service could not be implemented until the extension is done, unless private roads in Marina Bay were used for access.

Mahoney and Liang both questioned the timing of the meeting as well, saying residents were only notified of it on Jan. 24 and that the meeting was held 11 days before the parking lot would be closed.

"Honestly, I am hurt, and I am insulted," Liang said of the meeting's timing.

Liang also noted the T's meeting was held one day after the Lunar New Year — she compared it to hosting a meeting the day after Christmas — and on the same night the Quincy School Committee, Planning Board and Conservation Commission were all scheduled to meet.

Sen. John Keenan said he would press for shuttle service or other mitigation if it were needed. He encouraged residents who encounter issues once the project begins to contact his office, as they did when the Wollaston station first closed early last year.

"My experience on these projects — and I've been around a little while — has been that they are never as good as you hope they will be, and they're never quite as bad as what you fear," Keenan said.

"To make it so that it's better than what you fear and closer to being what you hope for, you need to be constantly engaged and constantly pushing and constantly trying to get better results. That's what we will do."

Keenan noted that more than $900 million is being invested in the Red Line, and other regions of the state would jump on the opportunity for such improvements if the money were available. The entire fleet of train cars will be replaced, along with the signals used on the tracks, enabling trains to run more frequently. The Quincy Adams and Braintree garages are being renovated to extend their lifespans, Wollaston will re-open later this year, and a mixed-use development is in the works at Quincy Center.

"We cannot lose this opportunity. This is an opportunity that will transform transportation on the Red Line for the next 50 years. There is no doubt there are hardships — and we're going to work hard to minimize those — but $911 million is being invested," Keenan said.

"A lot is being done, and it's going to be worth it when it's done."

State Music Festival Students Honored

By TOM GORMAN

Several Quincy students have been selected to participate in the annual Massachusetts Music Educators Association Eastern District senior and junior band and chorus festivals.

The school committee recently recognized the chorus and instrumental students. The senior festival was held in January and the junior event is scheduled for March. Students were accepted to participate based on their auditions.

"These students have worked very hard to show their outstanding musical technique, their sight reading abilities, and their performance skills through competitive auditions which included music students from school districts from all over the eastern part of the state," Quincy Public Schools Director of High School Curriculum and Programs Dr. Elizabeth Hallett told the committee in introducing the students.

Participating in the senior music festival's senior district band were Quincy High School grade 12 student Daniel Hagborg on the clarinet; Quincy High grade 10 student Cecily Zhao who performed on the harp in the senior orchestra. Singing in the senior choir was Quincy High grade 11 student Stephen Hallahan, a tenor.

Students who will participate in the March junior festival choir are Quincy High grade 9 student Kevin Chen, a bass; Quincy High grade 9 student Rebecca Morris, a soprano; and North Quincy High grade 9 student, Kobe Khuong, a tenor.

The senior and junior festival ensembles include band, chorus, jazz ensemble, and orchestra. Additionally, the junior festival ensembles include mixed chorus and treble chorus.

Hallett recognized Quincy choir director Timothy Carew, and band directors Michael DeMarco and Richard Kenneally.

Committee member Paul Bregoli praised the music department's leadership in the "hiring of people that were brought into the system that speaks volumes as to why we have so many young people who now are excelling in both voice and instruments."

Quincy School Supt.

Dr. Richard DeCristofaro thanked parents for "for their constant support of our students the music program."

According to the Massachusetts Music Educators Association website, the festivals are meant to augment district music curriculums.

"The Eastern District Junior and Senior Festivals are extensions of school music programs and are designed to offer students in public, private, and parochial schools additional opportunities to rehearse and perform challenging literature with guest conductors," stated the website.

The website noted students auditioning for Eastern District and/or All State are to be members "in good standing" in their own school music groups.

Senior festival auditions are open to students in grades 9, 10, 11 and 12. The junior festival auditions are open to students in grades 7, 8 and 9.

Council OKs Statements Of Interest For 2 School Projects

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council unanimously approved sending statements of interest for two school projects – the replacement or renovation of the Squantum Elementary School and emergency repairs done last year at Broad Meadows Middle School – to state officials, the first step in the process to receive reimbursement for each.

The council signed off on the statements of interest to the Massachusetts School Building Authority on Feb. 4. The School Committee approved the same statements of interest in January.

Mayor Thomas Koch has identified the Squantum Elementary School as the school system's top priority for replacement or renovation. The school, located on Huckins Avenue, first opened its doors to students in 1919 and an addition was added in 1971.

The council and school board have submitted statements of interest to replace or renovate the facility each year since 2015. City officials are optimistic the MSBA will take a closer look this year with the South-West Middle School – the replacement for Sterling Middle School – set to open this spring.

Ward 6 Councillor William Harris, whose district includes Squantum, spoke in favor of the request during the Feb. 4 meeting.

"[This] will maintain the Squantum Elementary School as the immediate next priority in the city's ongoing school replacement/renovation program that has produced two new schools since 2010 and a third scheduled to open later this year. I'm proud tonight to continue to advocate on behalf of this project that is absolutely vital to the neighborhood of Squantum and the Quincy Public Schools," Harris said.

"I understand the full planning and feasibility process and associated state matching funds will not be able to begin in earnest until the city closes its current project, the South-West Middle School. I look forward ward to working together with the neighborhood, our school parents and Mayor Koch in bringing this project to reality as soon as the state gives us the greenlight, hopefully later this year after the new school opens."

Councillor Nina Liang said the building has not changed since she was a student there.

"I went to the Squantum School and I'm pretty sure it's exactly the same as when I was in kindergarten and first grade," she said. "As we continue to grow, one of the things we want to prioritize is our services are also growing with that. I'm really excited to see this school move along in that process to get redone."

Councillor Noel DiBona, a former school board member, said the building's roof has leaked in recent years.

"Over the last few years, I know they've had some roof leaking in the media center/library that was discomfiting at different times of the year," he said. "I know we're patching it up and moving on, but construction of this in the overall scheme of the other buildings around the city is not in that great a condition."

4-H Embrology Program

The Norfolk County 4-H Office announces it will be continuing to work with local educators who teach youth in grades kindergarten and up by providing resources for embryology science projects.

Curriculum, supplementary materials and posters explore embryology from incubation to hatching and incorporate activities that focus on reinforcing the scientific method of learning. Fertile chicken eggs will be provided for hatching.

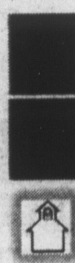

Pre-registration by April 6 is required for participation in this popular program. Fertilized eggs will be available for pick up on April 23 in Walpole when pre-ordered.

The hatch date will be on or about May 14. Incubators will also be available for rent.

O'Donnell Assistant Recorder Of Land Court

In order to execute a critical part of his official duties as Norfolk County Register of Deeds, William P. O'Donnell was recently sworn in as the county's Assistant Recorder of the Land Court by Chief Justice Gordon Piper of the Massachusetts Land Court.

O'Donnell, who was elected to a third full term in office last November, explained the role of assistant recorder of the Land Court.

"Massachusetts has two classifications of land: recorded land and registered land. The Massachusetts Land Court is responsible for resolving disputes involving land or real property. Once the case is resolved by the Land Court, I, as Register of Deeds, am responsible for overseeing the recording and safe keeping of these registered land records in Norfolk County. This is why the Register of Deeds is required to be sworn in as an Assistant Recorder of the Land Court," O'Donnell said.

In the case of Norfolk County, approximately 80 percent of the property is classified as recorded land and the remaining 20 percent is considered registered land or "Land Court property."

Register O'Donnell noted:

"Whether the land in question is recorded or registered land, I take my responsibilities as an assistant recorder of the Land Court very seriously. The citizens of Norfolk County can be assured that the county's approximately 8.5 million land documents are being recorded accurately, efficiently and are available online for viewing via our state-of-the-art computer system.

"Finally, I want to thank Chief Justice Piper, the Court's Associate Justices and their staffs for their graciousness and kind remarks extended to me at my swearing-in ceremony. The level of cooperation and mutual respect exhibited between the state and county has been critical to achieving our goals with regard to the recording and safekeeping of registered land documents," O'Donnell added.

New Southwest Middle School Opening June 3

before a Certificate of Occupancy can be issued that would allow the school to open.

Even if the gas project is completed before May, officials decided to wait until June to open the school so as to not interfere with the MCAS testing that gets underway in May.

The superintendent said the move into the new school will be well managed.

"We have a transition team in place," he said. "We will let parents know and keep them informed as we go."

Construction on the new school began in June, 2017. The exterior was buttoned up this fall and work has been underway inside. The finishing touches are now being made and some equipment has already arrived on site.

The school is being built next to the 92-year-old Sterling Middle School on Granite Street that it will replace. During the summer, the Sterling building will be razed to make way for playfields.

In another matter, the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) was recognized by the committee for its 15 plus years a community business partner with the school system. NAGE's Special Assistant to the President Kevin Doyle and charitable trust President Mary Sheehan were on hand to accept an award from the committee on behalf of NAGE President David Holloway who was unable to attend.

DeCristofaro noted the association has supported the district's teacher mentoring program for the past 15 years, contributing $10,000 a year to the initiative. Additionally, the superintendent said that NAGE is a major funder of the annual teacher mini-grants as well as the backpack program – the latter where each year a school is selected and NAGE purchases and disseminates backpacks to students.

The association also donates flags to the schools each year and is a participant in Flag Day ceremonies. NAGE additionally offers internships to seniors at North Quincy and Quincy high schools.

"We are tremendously fortunate that you are our partners," DeCristofaro said. "You have touched so many lives in every school in the city."

Doyle voiced appreciation for being honored.

"We are honored to be here and we are proud to help in any way we can," he said. "We will help as long as we can."

Doyle noted the backpack donation program – that originated in Quincy – has spread throughout the nation through NAGE's regional offices.

"This has gone beyond Quincy," he said. "We're all over the country from Atlanta, Georgia to Boise, Idaho. You guys inspired us to reach across the country."

Parents Can Schedule Kindergarten Registration Appointment Online

Kindergarten registration begins on March 5 and parents are encouraged to preregister on the Quincy Public Schools' website, quincypublicschools.org, as soon as possible. Once the preregistration form is completed and submitted, parents will be notified of their appointment date and time.

"It may take a while to get through the volume, but we will be aware of peoples' times," Owens said.

Parents will be given a 20 to 30-minute time slot to register their child.

Owens said registration packets are also on the district website.

"Everyone call fill those out at home and be prepared with the right documentation when they come in, so that will streamline the process," she said. "It will help us also to know what estimated numbers are for school sites earlier."

Children are not required to attend the registration appointment. A screening appointment will be scheduled for May.

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said the issue of crowding during the registration process was raised last year.

"This came up a couple times last year when we were reviewing safety and security and some parents asked about it," he said. "We looked into it and I think this is a really big step and a good step. We'll see how it works and see where we go from there."

Owens added that if the preregistration turns out to be successful, it will be implemented earlier next year.

"If this works out, we can start it up even earlier next year," she said. "It will give us an idea long ahead of time about what our next year's classes will look like."

She noted that within a couple hours of posting the preregistration form online, six families signed up.

Children who will be 5 years of age on or before Aug. 31, 2019 are eligible to attend kindergarten beginning this upcoming September.

If a parent is not sure of the neighborhood school their child is to attend, there is a link on the district website that provides a street directory.

Students who current attend the prekindergarten program at the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center, Point Webster, or the Snug Harbor schools are not required to register for kindergarten.

"Our fire prevention unit has gone out, they've identified buildings from the past and they approached them before the weather got really bad to see what they were going to do to prevent what occurred just last year."

The Quincy Fire Department is set to receive two new fire trucks later this year.

One will be a new ladder truck to replace Ladder 2 at the Wollaston firehouse. The new ladder will be a tiller truck, which features a second steering wheel in the rear of the vehicle, allowing the back to move independently of the front, giving the vehicle greater maneuverability.

"When I came on, we had several of them," Cade-gan said of the tiller trucks. "It's a unique truck in the sense that it looks big and awkward, but it's amazing how you can get it into tight places because you can maneuver the whole rear end of the truck separate from the front cab."

Ladder 2, the chief noted, is also the department's hazardous materials unit and responds to every incident.

"They are our hazmat unit and we're hoping to expand our hazmat, and that truck will help with the gear that is needed," he said.

The department is also in the process of purchasing a new rescue truck to replace

Rescue 1. Cade-gan said the new Rescue 1, which will be funded in part by a federal grant that several Quincy firefighters applied for, would be delivered later this year.

Rescue 1 responds to all incidents, the fire chief noted. The firefighters assigned to Rescue 1 are trained in various rescue operations, like urban search and rescue, collapse rescue and trench rescue.

In addition to new apparatus, the department is also taking steps to combat rising cancer rates firefighters are facing nationwide. This includes providing each firefighter with a second set of turnout gear and new industrial washing and drying machines and decontamination stations at each firehouse.

"It was put well by the commissioner in Boston – every house fire now is basically a hazmat incident because of what's burning. It's not wood and cotton and wool. It's hydrocarbons – your plastics and polymers and things like that," Cade-gan said.

"When they burn and they get in the air, our guys go in with all that gear. It protects us very well from the heat of the fire, but you also sweat like no tomorrow in a short amount of time. That opens up all your pores and now all those chemicals are being absorbed into your skin. That's why the rates of skin cancers and melanoma are jumping. Boston is great. They've been doing very proactive research and stuff into the high cancer rates on the job. It used to always be heart attacks were the biggest killer, now it is or is going to be cancer unfortunately. I came on with guys that have already got it unfortunately. We all thought the mask was going to be the savior – and it has, don't get me wrong – but it's getting to the guys other ways."

"Some of the new gear is being designed for that. That will help. We have more decon [standard operating procedures] now when guys after the fire, they basically wash themselves down, all their gear. As things progress, they're going to eventually move in to what they call clean cabs and we'll be taking all our firefighting gear off before we leave the scene. It will be bagged, put into a compartment in the truck, and then they'll drive back to the station in their work clothes that are cleaner. Hopefully that will help."

"Right now, the mayor and the city are installing new wash bays for the firefighters on the main floors so that they come back from a fire, they disrobe, all their firefighting gear goes into a certain area. With this new gear that we got, everybody will have a second set of clean gear that they'll use."

On Tuesday, Feb. 5, at approximately 6 p.m., Officers Millane, Tait, Murphy, Foley and Sgt. Ward responded to the 100 block of Whitwell Street for a larceny/robbery of a purse. While enroute, Communications relayed that the suspect was a large male dressed all in black on Roselin Avenue running towards Whitwell Street.

Officer Millane located the suspect walking out of the driveway of a Bedford Street home. As the officer exited his cruiser, the suspect walked up to the cruiser and dropped two bags on the sidewalk and then put both his hands over his head as if under arrest.

Officer Murphy arrived on scene moments later. A female in a car pulled up, quickly exited and frantically approached the officers, pointing and stating, "That is the person who robbed me." She then added, "That's my bag that he took from me."

The victim stated she works in the area and was walking a short distance towards her car when the suspect approached her in a very aggressive walk. She stated the suspect then groaned very loudly at her. She said she was "very scared."

The suspect then sternly said, "Get in the car," which she did. Her driver's side door was open as the suspect told her, "Give me your bags - all of them." The suspect moved in closer to the victim as she clutched her purse so she gave the suspect her small black nylon bag that she had around her left arm. She said she also gave him a small plastic bag which contained peanuts and a small Tupperware container.

As the suspect took the bags, the victim saw the opportunity and quickly closed the car door and locked it. The suspect reacted by banging his hands very hard on the back of the vehicle's trunk area while yelling, "Go - Go." She said that when she hesitated, the suspect again slammed the back of her car and yelled, "Leave - Go - Go." She then drove off a safe distance away and while watching him, made the "911" to the Quincy Police.

Dispatcher Bowes obtained information about the suspect and forwarded it to responding units. She reported that the suspect walked into traffic on Whitwell Street causing traffic to stop. She then saw the officers confront the suspect. Officer Millane located the victim's iPhone charger on the suspect along with the plastic bag with the contents the victim pre-described.

The suspect, a 30-year-old homeless male, was placed under arrest for unarmed robbery and transported to the station for booking. There was also an outstanding warrant for his arrest out of Salem District Court issued in July 2018 for assault with a dangerous weapon, assault, destruction of property over $1,200, disorderly person and assault and battery on a police officer.

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE

On Wednesday, Feb. 6, at approximately 2:15 p.m., Anti-Crime Unit Officer Ryan Donnelly, dressed in plain clothes, responded to a call in the rear of Quirk Nissan located on Southern Artery.

The caller stated there was a drunk male who almost fell into the water while yelling and violently swing a stick around. The officer spotted the male sitting on the rocks next to the water in between the Sea Monkey Marina and Quirk Nissan.

Officer Donnelly heard the male yelling incoherently as he stood up and started swinging a 3-foot-long solid wood 2-inch by 2-inch squared post (like a deck rail post). The officer identified himself while exhibiting his police badge. The male glanced back and said, "Oh yea, f@#$ you." The male then raised the post as if he was preparing to attack by swinging it.

At a safe distance, Officer Donnelly ordered the male to drop the post but again he swore at the officer. When the male took steps toward the officer and raised the post above his head in a strike position, the officer, in fear of imminent serious injury or death, drew his firearm and pointed it at the male while ordering him to drop the post and drop to his knees. The male stopped moving and after a few seconds, dropped the post and went down to his knees.

Officer Donnelly re-holstered his firearm and handcuffed the male. The male suspect, a 51-year-old homeless male, was placed under arrest and transported to the station for booking. This was the second time he was arrested in a week, the first at the library for trespassing. He was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon to wit wooden post and disorderly conduct.

medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology, and behavioral health.

Before development on the Ross Lot can begin, the City Council will have to approve a land disposition agreement (LDA) authorizing the sale of the land to the developer. Koch said he plans to submit the LDA to the council for approval on Feb. 25. The project would also require approval from the Planning Board.

Part of the agreement with FoxRock will include tax benefits for the medical space, Koch said, but not the hotel or residential buildings. South Shore Health System and Partners HealthCare are both non-profit companies.

"They will certainly be paying on the hotel and the residential," the mayor said. "The question is what would they pay for the medical, if anything. Generally, medical business is non-profit and doesn't pay taxes, and I'm willing to forego that to bring medical uses back to the city."

"We're still working out the numbers so I can't really say what the numbers are at this point," Koch added.

He will also introduce on Feb. 25 a new bond for downtown improvements in the range of $25 million. That bond will include funding to design a new public parking garage in the area of the Ross Lot; Koch expects state money would be used to fund the garage's construction. The bond will be paid for using the district improvement financing (DIF) program, which means new tax revenue from Quincy Center would pay back the funds borrowed.

In addition, Koch said he plans to introduce a new amendment to the Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center during the council's Feb. 25 meeting. The mayor said the amended plan would identify additional properties in the area for the city to acquire to spur redevelopment.

FOXROCK PROPERTIES plans to construct three new buildings on the site of the Ross Lot – a hotel, residences and medical office space. South Shore Hospital and Brigham and Women's Hospital recently announced plans to share the 200,000-square-foot medical office building.

"We'll be identifying more properties for potential taking...you can't take a property later, even under friendly taking, if it's not identified in your urban redevelopment plan," Koch said.

"If you've got a landlord or land owner that is unwilling to play ball – some of them may not even visit here, they collect their rents and don't really pay attention – then we'll have to make a decision as a city, do we take a piece of land so we can get the greater good out of it for the public?"

"For example, there are old buildings along Hancock Street that aren't historic...nobody has paid attention to those buildings in a long, long time," Koch added. "If some of those building owners aren't interested in redeveloping it, we have people that may have interest in redeveloping it. If we can bring more jobs, transform the downtown, then that is something we should look at.

"That will be one property at a time, based on where we are with our development plan."

the increased risk for catastrophic storms. Boston officials have floated the idea of constructing a hurricane barrier to protect Boston Harbor from those threats, but Koch believes a regional approach is needed.

"We believe that the future of Boston Harbor and the threat of storm surge and rising sea level must be addressed by regional collaboration," Chris Walker, Koch's chief of staff, wrote in a memo to councillors last fall. "To that end, Mayor Koch this summer held a meeting of the 14 cities and towns that encompass the harbor to begin discussions about a regional plan to protect our communities in the coming decades.

"The issue has only become more vital following the devastating storms of last March and the reality that we are without question seeing more extreme storms and seasons over the last several years. Locally, we can point to 2018, 2015 and 2010 to name just a few. In the United States, 14 of the 16 most destructive storms over the last 100 years have occurred since 2004."

"Considering our city's vulnerability today and in the decades ahead, the time is now to begin exploring our options as a region," Walker added. "And the mayor believes this appropriation is a modest first step toward achieving that goal."

The money would fund the first stage of developing what Walker called a "layered defense," which would tie the city's existing coastal defense plans – such as new seawalls and drainage projects – with a larger plan that could include a harbor barrier or other concepts.

Walker said the city has identified four tasks to tackle during the first phase. They are:

Identifying, studying and advancing options for a "layered defense" of the city from sea level rise and storm-surge related flooding with a focus on regional solutions developed in cooperation with state, federal and local governments, the private sector and non-government organizations.

Formalizing a regional storm surge working group composed of Quincy and other municipalities that are flooded through Boston Harbor and working with this entity to develop a series of options for addressing such flooding.

Coordinating with city officials and city consultants the policies and programs for the "layered defense" of the city, integrating the regional options together with the city's ongoing plans.

Identifying federal, state and private funding available for the fuller study and development of regional options for addressing the impacts of sea level rise and storm surge on Boston Harbor communities.

Quincy Ices North Quincy With 4-2 Victory

By TOM JOYCE

The in-city high school boys hockey game last Saturday night exemplified the high level both of Quincy's schools have attained this season.

The Quincy High Presidents and North Quincy High Red Raiders played in front of a packed crowd at the Quincy Youth Arena, and both sides skated hard for 45 minutes. Ultimately, it was the Presidents who came out on top 4-2. With the win, they improved to 12-4-2 on the season while the Red Raiders fell to 13-5-0 overall.

"It was special all-around not only because of the hockey game, but because of Hockey Fights Cancer and money being raised for them," Presidents head coach Ted Walsh Jr. said. "Together we try to knock out cancer, which is a great thing. And to dominate the game the way we did territorially and with shots,

"I told the guys that this team is what we'd see in the state semifinal game of the Div. 2 tournament," Walsh added of the Red Raiders. "That's how good they are, and they've earned it, so that's a really good win for us."

Red Raiders head coach Matt Gibbons said:

North Quincy Boys Hoop Tops P.S.

By TOM JOYCE

The North Quincy High boys basketball team brought immense energy to the court from the opening tip off, and that made the difference in the contest.

The Red Raiders hosted Plymouth South last Friday night and were propelled to a 58-47 victory thanks to a hot start in the first quarter of the game. With the win, the Red Raiders improved to 6-11 on the season.

"It was complete energy," Red Raiders head coach Kevin Barrett said. "We were energized, particularly on defense. We were in two places at once and we did a great job of rebounding the ball and hitting shots off our rebound. We did a nice job of being selective in our transitions which gave us the opportunity to score. We pulled it out and ran our offense well which was nice to see."

"We've been preaching all year that we need to compete and bring energy for 32 minutes," he added. "Even though we did it really well for the first 12 minutes, I thought we got away from it at the end of that first half. Then we kind of found it again in the third quarter, but we played well enough in spurts to come up with the win."

The Red Raider started the game on a 16-2 run propelled by Tyler Le, who dropped eight of those points and finished the game with a team-high of 10. During the run, the Red Raiders had no issue hitting their shots and playing tremendous defense. Plymouth South snapped the scoring streak with less than a minute left in the first quarter by hitting a pair of free throws. After one quarter, the Red Raiders led 16-4.

The Red Raiders kept up the intensity and padded their lead as the second quarter progressed. Colby St. Marie started the quarter off with a layup from underneath the hoop, extending the team's lead to 14 points. This was part of the Red Raiders' 8-2 run to begin the quarter which included a pair of back-to-back baskets from Jerome Bing; with 2:45 remaining in the period, he also blocked a Plymouth South shot, stymieing a fast break opportunity for them.

With about 90 seconds left in the first half, Agu Ugwu sank a three-pointer, giving the Red Raiders a 19 point lead, 27-8. At half-time, the team led 27-10.

The Red Raiders were actually outscored by their opponent in the second half —not that it changed the outcome of the contest.

Ugwu dropped the first points of the half with 6:07 remaining in the third quarter; he hit a layup through traffic, putting the team up 29-10.

As Plymouth South's offense started to find some life, the Red Raiders provided an ample counter-punch to prevent their opponent from making a serious comeback. Aaron Huang and Steve Dalla hit three pointers for the Red Raiders with 3:11 and 2:17 left in the third quarter respectively, helping the team maintain a 17-point lead. Following Dalla's shot, the Red Raiders led 38-21 and headed into the fourth quarter, they led 43-26.

Plymouth South scored 21 points in the fourth quarter, by far their top performance in the game. They chipped away at the deficit and came within nine points of the lead with around one minute remaining. However, they then sent the Red Raiders to the foul line a few times, giving them free points, helping them protect the team.

The scoring effort was spread out for the Red Raiders in the win. In addition to Le's team-high 10 points, Bing, Ugwu and Dalla all chipped in nine points apiece. Ilan Valencius had eight more while St. Marie put up seven in the winning effort.

"I think at the beginning of the season that was our goal: to be a better team in the last 10 games than we were in the first 10 games," Barrett said. "I think we're more cohesive now. We have a better grasp and understanding of the offense. When things are clicking and the guys are executing, that's what you get. You get open shots for different guys. Hopefully, we can carry that through for the next few games."

"It was a good, collective team effort," he added. "I think everyone had a fingerprint in the win whether it was handling the pressure or hitting some key free throws down the stretch or just taking care of the ball when they were desperate to come after it. I was just proud of the way the team persevered through some of the pressure tonight."

The Red Raiders will conclude their regular season this Thursday, Feb. 14 against Pembroke at home (7 p.m. start time).

Seniors on the Red Raiders squad this season include Ilan Valencius, Darren Chen and Alex Atanassov.

NQ Girls Basketball Bows To Silver Lake, Plymouth South

By PAUL BREGOLI

The North Quincy Girls basketball team continued to struggle as the 2018-19 campaign draws to an end.

Hosting the Silver Lake Lakers Feb. 5, North played the visitors tough jumping out to a 13-10 first quarter lead behind senior captain Mary Kate McAleavey's 8 points and baskets by the Red Raiders other captains Samantha Smith and Maria Zraizaa. The hosts went ice cold in the second quarter only 3 points while the Lakers rung up 15 taking a 25-16 lead into the half. North was outscored 40-21 in the second half losing by a score of 65-37. McAleavey led all scorers with 20 points while Smith finished with 9.

Traveling to Plymouth South last Friday, the Red and Black continued to struggle on the offensive end with a hoop by McAleavey the only points put up by North. On the bright side, the Northerner's defense was exceptionally tough holding South to 3 points in the quarter and 10 points in the half. North outscored the Panthers in the second quarter 8-7, getting another hoop from McAleavey a driving layup by Kiara Sleiman, a baseline jumper by Sydney Taylor and two free throws by Ashley Caldwell. McAleavey carried the visitors into the fourth quarter with 8 points before fouling out early in the fourth frame. North entered the last quarter trailing by 3, 24-21. NQ continued to struggle from both the field and the line, only managing 7 points while the Panthers put up 18.

"We really struggled all night offensively," said head coach Paul Bregoli. "We shot 20 percent from the floor and 35 percent from the line. It's almost impossible to win shooting like that. We did play great defense but we tired down the stretch."

North wraps up the season this week traveling to first-place Pembroke tonight (Thursday) and hosting Hull at North Quincy Saturday, Feb. 16 on Senior Night at 5 p.m.

in a goal for Quincy, erasing the deficit and two minutes later, they took the lead.

The Presidents capitalized on a power play opportunity with 10 minutes remaining in the second period; Griffin Lynch scored the go-ahead goal, and thanks to some tough defense and play in net from goaltender Dan Murphy, they held a 2-1 lead headed into the final period of the contest.

The Red Raiders ended up tying the game with around 10 minutes remaining; the goal came off the stick of Mike Izzo and meant it was anyone's game to win at that point.

Ultimately, the Presidents managed to come out on top. Freshman Zach Galligan scored the game-deciding goal with around four minutes left in the final period on a breakaway.

North Quincy could not match this goal. They called a timeout with 90 seconds remaining in the game and pulled goaltender Asher Wines, who had been sharp all night, in order to get an extra skater on the ice. They were unable to tie the game and Dan O'Leary buried an empty netter with around 30 seconds remaining, giving the Presidents an insurance goal and securing the victory.

After having tied back-to-back games, the win moved the Presidents in a positive direction; Walsh credited their success to his players' execution for 45 minutes.

"We practice hard," he said. "Everything we do simulates a game situation. Faceoffs, forecheck coverage, neutral zone coverage. It was very frustrating for North Quincy trying to beat us in the neutral zone because of the system we have in place. We can do anything we want, but the boys have to execute and they've done a wonderful job doing it. The guys just wanted it. You could see it in their faces."

"The seniors in particular know they're never playing each other ever again, so they're all selling out everything they have," he added. "Both teams played as hard as they could and tonight just happened to be our night."

Even though they did not come out on top, the game was equally as valuable for the Red Raiders. A Div. 3 team themselves, they performed well against one of the toughest Div. 2 teams in the area in front of a massive crowd.

"We just need to be a little bit better," Gibbons said. "That's a really good hockey team with a lot of experience we just played. I think if anything, our guys gained a ton of experience in 45 minutes just by playing in a game like this."

Gibbons said he was especially impressed by the performance from junior defenseman Andrew Hally in the bout; in addition to the team's usual standouts, he added that junior forwards Connor Kulig and Dylan Connors also played especially well.

He also said the team's senior class—which features forwards John Early, Kieran

McMorrow Returns, Quincy Girls Win

The Quincy girls basketball team defeated Hanover but bowed to Hingham in recent action.

On the road against Hanover last Friday night, the Presidents bounced the Indians, 60-41, as junior forward Allison McMorrow returned to the line-up after missing five games. McMorrow scored a team-high 13 points in the victory as Quincy improved to 7-6 in the Patriot League and 10-8 overall.

Other strong contributors for Quincy were senior guard Gia Calabro who scored 12 points on four three-pointers, junior guard O'Driscoll, Noah Wines, Andrew Airosus and team manager David Maher have been exceptionally valuable to the team and hopes the team's success can carry on for them.

"Those five guys have been really special to the program and I can't wait to keep it going over these next few weeks," he said. "For those guys, we wish we could've got the win tonight, but our goal is bigger than this."

"It's bigger than February 9, so we'll just use this as a teaching tool. That's all."

Jillian O'Toole with 8 points and junior forward Juliana Tracey with 10 points.

Both teams struggled to find the hoop early with Quincy taking a 10 to 6 lead after 1. They found their stroke in the second half erupting for 25 points in the period.

Quincy took a 35-21 lead into the half and were able to hold onto the lead throughout the second half eventually closing out the game 62-41. Quincy connected on a total of 10 three pointers in the contest.

Against Hingham Feb. 5, Quincy fell on the road 69-56. Junior Guard Jillian O'Toole had 13 points, and junior forwards Juliana Tracey and Brenna Tobin each had 16 points.

Quincy jumped out to an 11-0 lead to start the contest. Hingham battled back to cut the lead to four at the end of the first period.

Quincy went into the break up 40-32. Hingham caught fire in the third outscoring the president's 19 to 4 through a relentless onslaught of long-range bombs. They connected on 10 3-pointers for the game.

Quincy hit eight of their own but it wasn't enough as they fell in 69 to 56.

QC Granite Basketball Aims To Cinch Playoff Spot

Well into the second half of the Quincy College Granite Men's Basketball Season, Quincy Granite's Head Coach Doug Scott knew his team would have to split two games versus National Junior College Athletic Association powerhouses Bristol Community College who sits atop the region and Springfield Technical Community College to possibly secure a playoff birth in the Region 21 standings.

On Feb. 5th, Quincy College Granite faced first place Bristol Community College at Granite's Home Court, Eastern Nazarene College's Lahue Gym. Bristol CC solidified their first place ranking with a 117-72 win over Quincy College. Quincy College Granite team captain and point guard Jon DaVeiga led the Granite with 23 points followed by NJCAA Region 21 leading scorer Darrius Hyppolite's 18 points. However, the Granite's offense couldn't keep their momentum against the talented Bristol CC team.

On Feb. 7th, Quincy College Granite traveled to Springfield Technical Community College for a must-win contest. Despite strong play and offensive efforts, Granite fell short with a final score of 79-70. Cam Mason led the Quincy College Granite team with his best game of the season netting 23 points and 7 rebounds. Also working for the Granite offensive was Trayve Qualls with 17 points and 6 rebounds.

As Quincy College Granite wraps its last two weeks of regular season play, only four games remain in the regular season. Quincy College Granite is holding at 7th place in a conference that will send the top 6 teams to the Region 21 playoffs on the weekend of March 3rd. Quincy College Granite will have a key matchup versus long-standing rival Massachusetts Community College today (Thursday) at the Lahue Gym for possible playoff spot.

Quincy College's Granite's regular season play concludes Monday, Feb. 25th. Home games are free and open to the public. ## Benefits Of A Community Supported Agriculture Share

At the base of Great Blue Hill, on the Milton/Canton border, lies Brookwood Community Farm. Produce is grown using organic methods by local farmers who know how to reliably deliver nutrient-dense food that will sustain us and the environment.

Every week from the end of May until the end of November a couple hundred people come to the farm to pick up their share of vegetables.

Brookwood, a Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) farm, shows how growers and consumers have linked arms to bring locally produced food to communities and much needed funding to farmers.

With a short growing season, unpredictable weather conditions and unbelievably rocky soil, New England farmers already have the odds stacked against them when it comes to profitable agriculture.

Committing to a CSA share at this time of year, means you value responsible farming both for your body and the environment. Your deposit will pay farm staff and buy seeds, soil amendments and other necessary supplies to get growing as soon as possible.

Some additional benefits of purchasing a CSA share from Brookwood are:

- Guaranteed fresh local food. No other purchasing opportunity promises to reserve a portion of the season's bounty especially for you, right from the field.

- Heirloom and unusual produce. The grocery store produce selection rarely changes, even though most vegetables are only in season locally for a short time each year. Brookwood farmers grow new varieties of old favorites each year not found on supermarket shelves.

- Connected with our climate. Each year brings with it a unique set of environmental circumstances. Too much rain all at once. A cold snap during a sensitive growing period. An outbreak of fungi or pests. When we live in our climate-controlled homes and buy food that comes from monoculture mega-farms, we lose touch with how much the weather impacts the world around us. Local produce makes us more aware of what is going on outside our windows and the harmful environmental effects that can come from conventionally grown produce.

To learn more about Brookwood, cooking classes, events, and to sign up for a CSA share, go to www.brookwoodcommunityfarm.org. All are welcome to the farm at 11 Blue Hill River Rd., Canton, for the Seedling Sale, May 11-12.

Sheriff McDermott Teams Up With QHS To Host Seniors Lunch

Seniors from the Milton Council on Aging recently traveled to Quincy High School to take part in Norfolk County Sheriff Jerome P. McDermott's C.A.F.E. program.

Through his C.A.F.E. program (Creating A Feast for Elders), the seniors were able to enjoy a delicious, inexpensive lunch prepared by the students at President's Café in Quincy High School. This intergenerational program brings together high school students with local seniors, in an effort to bridge the gap between the younger and elderly population.

"This program is an opportunity for young people to learn about customer service and hospitality, while interacting with our senior population," Sheriff McDermott said. "We have found that such programs produce unexpected benefits for both the students and the seniors."

Sheriff McDermott said he was grateful for the leadership of Quincy High Principal Lawrence Taglieri and Hospitality Instructor Lynn Bailey and the work of TRIAD Director Joe Canavan and TRIAD Officer Cheryl Bamberg in organizing the C.A.F.E. program.

Quincy's Clare Murphy Reaches 300 Career Wins As Fontbonne Hoop Coach

Fontbonne Academy basketball coach Clare Murphy of Quincy recently reached a career milestone achieving her 300th win on Jan. 29th.

"I have been so blessed over my years at Fontbonne to have talented, committed and hard-working girls. Without these outstanding players, my achievement of 300 wins would never have happened," Murphy said.

Murphy has been a basketball coach at Fontbonne in Milton for 21 years. Her commitment to the athletic program has proven to be invaluable. Murphy was named Coach of the Year for the third time this season by the Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association (MBCA). She received this award back in 2002 and again in 2017.

"I am a proud graduate of Fontbonne and was an assistant coach for seven years prior to becoming the head coach. Being able to coach in the same gym I once played in and to have this continued success is amazing," coach Murphy said.

Last season, varsity basketball finished the season 19-5 and advanced to the Division 3 South Final for the third straight season. This year, the varsity team is 12-7, the team is finishing up its regular season and is vigorously preparing for the state tournament.

"As most people know, Clare Murphy is an outstanding basketball coach, but for the girls and I she is much more. She has become that second mom figure to all of us," senior co-captain Katy O'Brien said.

"She has inspired me to always give 110 percent, whether it be a practice, game, or just in regular life. Clare can see the potential in every single person and she works hard to encourage and push us to be the best players that we are capable of being."

"Before I came to Fontbonne, I had never had a female basketball coach, so it is really cool to be coached by someone who I can look up to and relate to," senior co-captain Mary Ryan said of her experience with Coach Murphy.

Fundraiser Feb. 23 To Support Daniel Cunniff's Participation In 4-K Bike Ride For Cancer

A fundraiser will be held Saturday, Feb. 23 at The Chantey at Marina Bay to benefit Quincy resident Daniel Cunniff's participation in the Ulman Foundation's 4K for Cancer this summer.

Beginning on June 2, Cunniff will join a group of young adults from around the country to participate in a 4,000 mile bike ride across the United States, from Baltimore, Maryland to San Francisco, California, to raise money for The Ulman Foundation—a nonprofit organization that changes lives by providing a community of support for young adults and their loved ones who are impacted by cancer.

The organization provides vital support services, scholarships and housing.

"I am travelling 4,000 miles this summer because I believe in the power of individuals coming together and fighting against something that affects not only them directly, but so many of their loved ones. After watching some of my close relatives fight this disease, I feel honored to be able to participate in this summer's 4K for Cancer," said Cunniff.

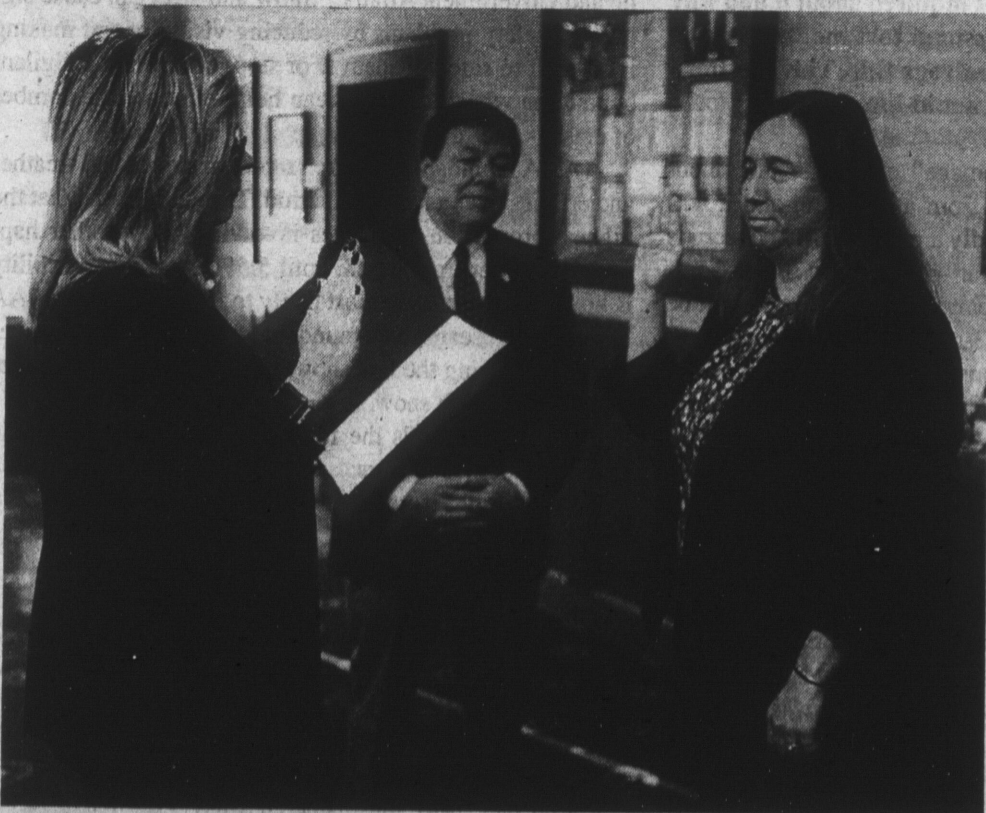

All participants are responsible for fundraising in advance of their rides. Cunniff invites the Quincy community to join him on Saturday, Feb. 23 from 2 to 6 p.m. at The Chantey, 333 Victory Rd., Marina Bay, for a fundraising event that will include raffles and auction items from local area businesses.

All proceeds will support The Ulman Foundation's services for young adults.

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

In a shop you would add a dye to the oil and then run the engine a bit and shut off the lights and using an ultraviolet light look for traces of dye. Back years ago, before these time-saving gadgets, we would clean and dry the engine and sprinkle talcum powder around the suspected area. Then let the engine run and if there is a leak, you can easily trace it in the powder.

I just recently purchased a Ford Taurus from a police auction but now I'm concerned this great deal is not that great. I was checking all the fluids and it appears as if there is oil in the antifreeze. When I asked someone more knowledgeable than me, they suspect a cracked block or head gasket. There is no warranty, so I'm stuck with the car and now I'm thinking of junking the car or buying a used engine for it. What would you do?

The first thing to do is determine the actual problem. You can buy or sometime rent a "block-check" kit from an auto parts store. This kit will tell you if you have combustion gases in the coolant. The other more common possible problem is the oil is actually transmission fluid and the transmission cooler that is internal to the radiator is leaking and allows transmission fluid to mix with the coolant. Spend a little time to determine that actual problem before jumping to drastic conclusions.

I'm in the market for a smaller SUV and there are too many choices. Have you driven anything lately that surprised you? I'm looking to spend no more than $35,000 and ride and handling are more important than off-road driving, although I still want all-wheel-drive for snowy weather. I heard your radio program podcast and you mentioned you recently purchased a Hyundai Santa Fe Sport and were happy with it. When I looked at that car the dealer was steering me toward the 2019 Santa Fe. What do you know about this new model?

You are correct this is a very popular segment with plenty of choices and all of them are pretty good. I'm happy with my vehicle but the latest model has its advantages. My model is a base version, no satellite radio or advanced driver assistance systems. The latest Santa Fe is slightly bigger, rides smoother and is equipped with all of the latest electronic technology. When I purchased my car in the spring Hyundai had some very aggressive pricing and being frugal (cheap) it was just what I was looking for. I ended up with an all-wheel-drive vehicle with a great warranty at a good price.

I have a 15-year-old car and the defroster only works on the high-speed fan setting. I have seen you answer this question before as a faulty fan motor resistor. I replaced the resistor and still only have high speed. Could the problem be a poor ground? The fan still works, and I don't really need all of the speed setting, but it would be nice.

In most cases the fan resistor is the problem but as you have experienced not every time. All circuits need power and ground and since the fan works on the high speed setting the ground circuit is okay. The next step is to test the switch and you can do that with a test light. As you change positions with the switch the light should illuminate. If the light only comes on the high position, the problem could be the switch or a loose corroded wiring connection. It looks like you may be spending your next weekend under the dash of your car.

I have a very dependable Honda Civic and recently I hit a curb and damaged a tire. When I purchased the new tire the tire salesman said I should really buy two tires that matched. Things have been a bit tight lately and said no. The car seems to handle and ride fine, but I keep wondering, should I really have two tires that match?

Having tires that match on each axle is always the ideal situation. That being said, there are probably millions of cars on the road that have mismatched tires. If the tires have similar tread design and tread depth you made the financially responsible decision.

We have a five-year old Hyundai Sonata bought new. Since it was new it has had a slight vague wandering. I will admit that my other car is an Audi and maybe I'm not comparing apples to apples. The dealer tells me it is normal, but I wonder if they are just waiting for car to go out of warranty.

You are correct that some cars track better than other and some do have a slight vagueness with "on-center" steering. I would start with checking the basics such as wheel alignment and tire pressure. Ask the alignment shop to road test the car with you so you both are on the same page. I would then ask the technician to be very critical about the specifications. All alignment setting have a range, ask the technician to be as precise as possible, setting the adjustment to the factory desired settings. In my own car I found a slight adjustment in tire pressure also made a noticeable difference in the steering.

I bought a 2012 Lexus RX350 a couple of years ago and really like the vehicle with two exceptions. When I am driving on our less-than-perfect roads the ride is very bumpy and there is a rattling noise. The other issue is I have outgrown this vehicle. My daughter and her daughter have come to live with us and we could really use a bigger vehicle. I have become used to the Lexus but feel I need to change to accommodate everyone.

I recently drove the Lexus RX350L and found it to be quite nice. Lexus stretched the RX about 4 inches and added a third-row seat. Like most three row mid-sized SUVs the third-row seating is tight, and entry and exit can be a challenge to some folks. That being said, I had six adults in this vehicle, and it worked out fine. You will find many features that feel the same as your current vehicle and with the additional seating and smoother ride may be just what you are looking for.

I read your response to the person with the 12-year old Honda Accord that went in for its 60,000 check-up the dealer suggested a replacement timing belt. I have the same car and the replacement is 105,000. Why would you suggest replacing the timing belt now?

In many cases Honda recommends timing belt replacement at 105,000 miles or 74 months whichever comes first. Since the timing belt is rubber and it can deteriorate over time and at that age if it were my car, I would want to replace it. The mental stress of driving a vehicle and knowing that at some point the timing belt has gone past its prime and could fail at any time and could cause expensive engine damage is more stress than I would want on my daily commute.

I have a Ford Focus wagon and it has been great, but it is time to move on. I'm looking for a small wagon that gets good mileage; most of the wagons are expensive luxury cars. Since GM and Ford don't seem to be in the "car" business anymore, is there something you can recommend that is not a SUV and under $25,000?

Last year Kia came out with the Niro. Kia calls it an SUV but since it is front wheel drive and not meant for off road use, I consider it a small wagon. It is roomy, rides and handles well and makes good use of interior space. Although not technically a wagon, the Subaru Impreza could work and with all-wheel drive is great in winter. The Volkswagen Golf Sportwagon is also fun to drive and quite practical. I wouldn't write off small SUVs; they are practical get decent fuel economy and for many people are easy to get in and out of.

I recently purchased a new car and was looking to wax it. When I was shopping, I found a new wax referred to as ceramic wax/coating. These products were more expensive. Is there a difference and is it worth it?

Traditional wax is usually a polymer or carnauba wax or a combination of both. The ceramic coating provides a thicker coating that is supposed to bond with the paint, last longer and be more resistant to environmental damage. I have not tried the ceramic coatings. Readers have you tried it and what do you think?

I just recently saw a 2015 Porsche Boxster at a really really good price. When I inquired about it and why it was priced so low, the salesman told me the car had "storm" damage and had a salvage title. This is a third car in our family and sort of a mid-life crisis car. Would you buy this car?

The problem is "storm-damage" can mean just about anything. If it was just dents from a hailstorm and it was repaired properly then it is hardly a problem. My concern is storm damage may mean the car was involved in a flood. If this is the case then unless repaired thoroughly you will be faced with mold and mildew issues, corroded connections and ongoing electrical problems. Years back I know someone who purchased a Porsche 911 with a similar history and he chased electrical gremlins for the entire time he owned the car. The other issue is the salvage title will follow the car forever and will certainly affect the value when you decide to sell it. I would only buy this car if I had it thoroughly inspected and with the reality that it will be a poor investment.

I just purchased a used Cadillac SRX and I love the vehicle but when I first start it there is a bit of a rough idle. After it runs for a couple of minutes it is fine. When I asked the dealer about it, they just said, they all do that. Is this really normal?

I'm not sure this is normal, but more of a characteristic of some direct fuel injection systems. A test should be performed on the fuel system just to verify that everything is correct. General Motors also recommends using "Top-Tier" gasoline, to minimize fuel system deposits which keeps the engine running smooth. If you can't use Top-Tier gasoline, use a quality fuel system additive periodically. I have had noticeable positive results with Techron, BG 44K and Lucas fuel system cleaners.

I had a problem with my car: the battery was going dead even though I replaced it about a year ago. I had the car looked at and the shop told me the alternator was not performing properly. I replaced the alternator myself, but still have the same problem. My brother-in-law told me to start the car and disconnect the battery and if the car stalls the alternator is bad, if it keeps running there is another problem. What should I do?

I would start by not taking automotive advice from your brother-in-law. Disconnecting the battery on a car with an alternator will cause high voltage spikes and can damage the alternator and other sensitive electronics. It is time to stop guessing and bring the car to a good repair shop for diagnosis and repair. If you don't have a good repair shop you can find one at www.aaa.com/autorepair. Once you have found a shop have a complete electrical system test performed including a test of parasitic drain. It is possible the alternator is working properly but there is an electrical drain causing the battery to become discharged.

I have a 2009 Hyundai with 90,000 miles on it. The car has been great but recently the check engine light came on, indicating it needed an oxygen sensor. I purchased a new oxygen sensor from the local parts store and installed it. The light has been out for a month, there are no codes, but there is an occasional hesitation. This hesitation only happens when the engine is cold and getting up to normal temperature. This did not happen until I replaced the oxygen sensor. Could the new part be defective?

It is possible that the aftermarket oxygen sensor isn't performing correctly. A technician with a quality scan tool may be able to watch the oxygen sensor voltage as the engine is warming up and see something out of the ordinary. I have seen many aftermarket sensors that just don't perform as well as the factory part. I have also seen many aftermarket parts outperform the factory part. Since the issue didn't happen until the sensor was replaced, logic indicates it could be a faulty sensor.

AAA New England: Drivers Be Prepared For Winter Driving

Dangerous winter storms, bad weather and sloppy road conditions are a factor in nearly half a million crashes and more than 2,000 road deaths every winter, according to the AAA Foundation for Traffic Safety.

About 46 percent of all crashes involving bad weather take place in the winter. AAA encourages drivers to be vigilant when hitting the road this winter and to always stay prepared by carrying an emergency roadside kit in your vehicle.

"There are a disproportionate number of crashes this time of year involving bad weather and winter storms," said Lloyd Albert, AAA Northeast Senior Vice President of Public and Government Affairs. "Snow and sleet can cause significant safety problems by reducing visibility and making it difficult to safely maneuver or stop, but by being vigilant behind the wheel, motorists can help to reduce the number of crashes and fatalities."

AAA Foundation research report analyzed bad weather and crashes over a five-year period. The study found that the highest proportion of crashes involving bad weather happens overnight from 6 p.m. until 5:59 a.m., when visibility is limited and roads are most likely to freeze. Previous AAA Foundation research also found that the rates of fatal crashes are higher during the first snowfall of the year than on subsequent days with snow.

AAA recommends the following tips while driving in snowy and icy conditions:

- Stay home. If you really don't have to go out, don't. Even if you can drive well in bad weather, it's better to avoid taking unnecessary risks by venturing out.
- Drive slowly. Always adjust your speed down to account for lower traction when driving on snow or ice.
- Accelerate and decelerate slowly. Apply the gas slowly to regain traction and avoid skids. Don't try to get moving in a hurry and take time to slow down for a stoplight. Remember: it takes longer to slow down on icy roads.
- Increase your following distance. Allow five to six seconds of following distance between your vehicle and any vehicle in front of you. This space allows you time to stop safely if the other driver brakes suddenly.

Jillian Hanley Allstate Agency Opens Office In Quincy

Allstate Insurance Company announces that Jillian Hanley, Allstate agency owner, recently opened her second agency in Quincy.

Hanley's Allstate agency offers auto, property, life, annuities and financial services products. She and her team of licensed staff are ready to consult with customers to help them with their needs.

Insurance is a family affair for Hanley and her family. Her grandmother opened an independent agency over twenty years ago, and joined Allstate in 2013. Hanley joined the family business in 2011 following her college graduation. The Hanley agency is also dedicated to volunteering in the South Boston and surrounding communities.

"One of my favorite things about working for Allstate is their dedication to community service," Hanley said. "I have never seen a company so passionate about giving back to its employee's communities. I have earned over $10,000 in community fund grants in my five years that have given back to organizations near and dear to my heart, like The Milton Animal League, The Dimmock Center, Toys for Tots, and a special $20,000 group grant to The Greater Boston Food Bank. I am excited to have the opportunity to serve the community that I call home."

The Jillian Hanley Allstate Agency is located at 135 Emerson St., South Boston, and the new location on 695 Adams St., Quincy. The office is open Mondays through Thursdays from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

To reach Jillian Hanley and her team call 617-500-4350 (South Boston) and 617-302-8418 (Quincy) or at thehanleyagency@allstate.com.

AAA New England: Drivers Be Prepared For Winter Driving

• Know your brakes. Whether you have antilock brakes or not, keep the heel of your foot on the floor and use the ball of your foot to apply firm, steady pressure on the brake pedal. Don't pump the brakes.

• Don't stop if you can avoid it. There's a big difference in the amount of inertia it takes to start moving from a full stop versus how much it takes to get moving while still rolling. If you can slow down enough to keep rolling until a traffic light changes, do it.

• Don't power up hills. Applying extra gas on snow-covered roads just starts your wheels spinning. Try to get a little inertia going before you reach the hill and let that inertia carry you to the top. As you reach the crest of the hill, reduce your speed and proceed downhill slowly.

• Don't stop going up a hill. There's nothing worse than trying to get moving up a hill on an icy road. Get some inertia going on a flat roadway before you take on the hill.

"More than 40 percent of motorists do not carry an emergency kit in their vehicle," said Albert. "Drivers attempting to brave bad weather should remain cautious and always be prepared by packing an emergency roadside kit."

AAA recommends always keeping the following items in your "emergency kit" for winter driving:

- Mobile phone and car charger
- First-aid kit
- Blankets
- Drinking water/snacks for everyone in the car including pets
- Flashlight with extra batteries
- Rags, paper towels or pre-moistened wipes
- Basic toolkit including duct tape and warning devices such as flares or reflectors

- Ice scraper/snow brush
- Jumper cables/jump pack
- Traction aid such as sand, salt or non-clumping cat litter
- Tarp, raincoat and gloves
- Shovel

Before hitting the road, drivers can download the free AAA Mobile app for iPhone, iPad and Android. They can use the app to map a route, find AAA Approved Auto Repair facilities and more.

For members in need of roadside assistance, they can use the app, visit AAA.com or call 1-800-AAA-HELP. For added convenience, Wazers can now request AAA roadside assistance directly from the Waze app by tapping the Report menu.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Try to say as little as possible about the work you're doing through the end of the month. Then you can make your announcement and accept your well-deserved plaudits.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You face a more difficult challenge than you expected. But with that strong Taurean determination, you should be able to deal with it successfully by week's end.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Before you act on your "feelings" about that upcoming decision, it might be wise to do a little fact-checking first. You could be very much surprised by what you don't find.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A recent workplace success can open some doors that were previously closed to you. On a personal level, expect to receive some important news from a long-time friend and colleague.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Put your wounded pride aside and do what you must to heal that misunderstanding before it takes a potentially irreversible turn and leaves you regretting the loss of a good friend.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) One way to kick a less-than-active social life into high gear or rebuild an outdated contacts list is to throw one of your well-organized get-togethers for friends and associates.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Getting out of an obligation you didn't really want to take on can be tricky. An honest explanation of the circumstances can help. Next time, pay more attention to your usually keen instincts.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Use your Scorpion logic to push for a no-nonsense approach to a perplexing situation. This could help keep present and potential problems from creating more confusion.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A friend's problem might take more time than you want to give. But staying with it once again proves the depth of your Sagittarian friendship and loyalty.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Sea Goat can benefit from an extra dose of self-confidence to unsettle your detractors, giving you the advantage of putting on a strong presentation of your position.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might want to ask a friend or relative for advice on an ongoing personal matter. But be careful not to give away information you might later wish you had kept secret.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use the weekend for a creativity break to help restore your spiritual energy. Once that's done, you'll be back and more than ready to tackle whatever challenge you need to face.
BORN THIS WEEK: You get great joy out of creating beautiful things and sharing them with others who appreciate them.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- I'm thrilled that my good friend Sam Elliott has finally received an Academy Award nomination for "A Star Is Born." I met Sam in 1967 when he and Tom Selleck were unknowns and in the contract program at 20th Century Fox, being paid $200 a week in what they called "earning while we're learning." When they left Fox, Sam hit it big with "Lifeguard" (1976), while Tom took the TV route, eventually making films after "Magnum P.I." became a global hit in 1980. Sam was paired with Katharine Ross in "The Legacy" in 1978, which led to marriage in 1984. Some of his most memorable roles were in "Mask" (1985), "Roadhouse" and "Prancer" (both in 1989), "Tombstone" (1993) and "The Big Lebowski" (1998). Sam and Tom played brothers in "The Sacketts" (1979) and "The Shadow Riders" (1982). Sam once asked me, "Am I making a mistake not going into television?" To which I said, "Follow your path and it will one day lead to an Oscar nomination." That prediction has finally come true. His latest, "The Man Who Killed Hitler and Then The Bigfoot," was just released. Sam was nominated twice for Golden Globe and Emmy Awards, and while he didn't win (all cliches aside), just being named one of the year's five best supporting actors makes him a winner already!

Channing passed away last month at age 97. She was unforgettable in "Hello Dolly" through the years and in her Golden Globe-winning role in "Thoroughly Modern Millie" (1967), but when Kaye Ballard, star of "The Mothers-In-Laws" (1967-69), passed away a week later (at 93), I was inconsolable. Carol and Kaye moved to Rancho Mirage, Palm Springs, and were the "Grand Dames of the Desert." Carol rekindled her romance with her childhood sweetheart Harry Kullijian and they were married from 2003-2011 (until his death). Her last TV appearance was as a judge on "Ru Paul's Drag Race" in 2016, and Kaye officially retired from entertaining in 2015. Both brought glamour and laughter to the desert (Channing arrived at events in a wheelchair toward the end). They will be sorely missed.

Producers of "The Sopranos" prequel feature film, "The Many Saints of Newark," have found the perfect lookalike to play James Gandolfini as a younger man. They've cast his son, Michael Gandolfini, who has appeared in five episodes of HBO's "The Deuce," as the busboy in "Ocean's Eight" (2018) and is in the upcoming "The Boy, the Dog and the Clown" as a drunk teen. His likeness to his late father is amazing. He has big shoes to fill ... hope he doesn't sing off key!

KOVELS' Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Figural Bottles --- Figural bottles were being made by the ancient Egyptians by 1546 B.C. That's more than 5,000 years ago. But collectors couldn't find many to collect until the early 1800s, when manufacturers started using them to sell whiskey or bitters medicine to an individual customer. Before that, most whiskey was ladled out of a barrel into your pottery container during a visit to the distillery. When bitters medicine was created from herbs, roots, bark, alcohol, drugs and other ingredients, it was sold in bottles to encourage sales to individuals. (There were few stores.) It made people feel better, but it was mainly because of the alcohol and drugs. Traveling medicine shows sold the bitters, which often was the only "medicine" available in a town with no doctor.

Many likenesses of George Washington, the "Father of our Country," were made to sell in 1876 because of bicentennial celebrations of the founding of the U.S. Simon's Centennial Bitters was sold in a bottle shaped like a bust of General George Washington on a pedestal. His name was molded on the bottle around the bottom of the bust. It was made by Bernard Simon of Scranton, Pennsylvania, and created using clear, aqua or amber glass. Later reproductions were made in amethyst and other colors. Many were made in the 1930s, probably because of renewed interest caused by the bicentennial celebration of Washington's birthday. A recent auction of a clear example standing 9 7/8 inches tall brought $748.

Q: I bought two Mexican Feathercraft pictures of birds in Mexico City in 1952 and am wondering if you can give me an idea of their worth. The bodies and tails of the birds are made from brightly colored feathers and their beaks and legs are painted. The trees in the background are also painted.

A: Featherwork pictures, jewelry and items of clothing were made in Mexico as early as the 1500s. Spanish conquerors took Mexican featherwork back to Europe, where it was popular until the 17th century. Early indigenous artists used the brightly colored feathers of tropical birds. Some more recent featherwork pictures are made from feathers that have been dyed to achieve the bright colors. Twentieth-century featherwork pictures, which are about 13 by 28 inches, have sold for $100-$150.

CURRENT PRICES

Carnival gambling wheel, wooden framed bicycle tire, pinned-on playing cards, mounted to plank, hanging, 1930s, 31-inch diameter, $1,300. Brass gong, quarter circle, hole near arc, Harry Ber-toia, c. 1950, 6 1/2 x 9 inches, $5,310. Cut glass, punch bowl, stand, Arabian, Eggington, 12 1/8 x 14 1/2 inches, $10,200.

TIP: An auction staff member examined a blanket chest that might be in a coming sale. He found a hidden compartment filled with valuable historical documents. That's another reminder to search for secret compartments in antiques.

* In Washington state it once was illegal to carry a concealed weapon that was more than 6 feet in length.

* Dominique Bouhours, a Frenchman who lived in the 17th century, was a priest, an essayist and a grammarian. The love of language may have been closest to his heart, though; it's been reported that the final words he uttered on his deathbed were, "I am about to -- or I am going to -- die; either expression is used."

* England's virgin queen, Elizabeth I, went bald at the age of 29. Smallpox was the culprit.

* According to a survey by the National Association of Convenience Stores, 11 percent of adult Americans have at some point in their lives worked at a convenience store or gas station. For 3 percent of adults, that was their first job.

* Those who study such things claim that to get a truly random mix in a deck of playing cards, the deck must be shuffled seven times.

* Chocolate lovers like myself may not believe it, but the most popular flavor of ice cream in the United States is actually vanilla. Chocolate comes in second place.

* In 1875, a locust plague of epic proportions descended upon the Great Plains. Observers say it was 110 miles wide, and at 1,800 miles long, stretched from Canada all the way down to Texas.

* "I store my extra sheets under the bed they go with in a storage box. On the lid of the box, I write the date when the mattress needs to be flipped. This way I never forget how long it has been." -- W.F. in Arkansas

* One way to de-pill a sweater is using a new scrubbie from kitchen. Just hold the sweater taut, and use the rough side of a kitchen sponge to lightly brush the fabric, letting it catch the pills and sweep them away.

* "To get rid of brassy undertones in your hair, mix 10 drops of blue food coloring and 5 drops of red food coloring in 2.5 cups of vinegar, and apply as a rinse to hair. The purple cools the red tones, and banishes the brass. The vinegar smell does dissipate, and it leaves hair with a softened shine, too." -- I.W. in Louisiana

* Did you squeeze out too much eye cream? Use it on your cuticles." -- A.S. in

Florida

* Here's the secret to dealing with muddy shoe prints: Let them dry. Loosen dirt clumps and vacuum up as much as possible. Then come in with an appropriate carpet cleaner. Never add water to mud.

* Set a standing appointment to check in with your budget and checkbook. If you don't already have a budget set, now's the time. Remember to factor in quarterly or yearly payments. You can divide them by the number of months they cover (say, six for car insurance) and pay that amount into your savings account each month. When the time comes to pay the bill, you'll have the money ready.
